Turks, Too, Violate Frontier, Damascus Spokesman Reports

Syrians Saturday night reported brief exchanges of gunfire between troops on both the Turkish and the Israeli frontiers, No casualties were listed in either incident.

A Syrian army snokesman said an Israeli patrol infiltrating Syrian territory near Jiel-bina, in the south, fired on border posts. He added: "Our troops returned the fire and the Israeli patrol withdrew."

The government information office announced a series of alorder announced a series of alleged incidents along the Turkish-Syrian frontier within the past 36 hours.

IN ONE, a Turkish patrol from the Nussibin post was said to have penetrated the northeast border Friday night and neared a Syrian military barracks. A Syrian guard or-dered the patrol to halt and the Turks fired a shot, the announcement said. Syrians returned the fire and the Turkish patrol withdrew. The announcement also said a Turkish patrol coming from the direction of Mhaish post kidnaped a Syrian herdsman and seized his cattle while shooting bullets in the air. The report said the Turks came 500 yards deep into Syria.

ALSO LISTED was an incident in which 60 Turkish troops, apparently training about 400 yards inside their own border, were "shooting bullets which landed in Syria."

The announcement men-tioned alleged flights of four planes over Syria's borders, by 4 Fliers land and sea, Friday.

Earlier Saturday, Syria Whirled showed concern over a NATO whirled States, Britain and Turkey are by Spout planning maneuvers along the Turkish coast next week.

Long Beach schools were fortunate in passing their last bond issue. They might have considerable trouble doing so today. Evidence from many parts of the country shows school bond issues failing. It is tragic for districts which are already overcrowded. But it is clear that the public is questioning the spiraling tax load on the people for school costs.

It is also disclosed from many parts of the country that greater attention is being given to extending the PORTALES, N. M. (49)—Scientific authority has relieved Sputnik and the Far Side rocket experiments of any responsibility, for this area's gossamer shower. The explanation involves spiders.

The fire started shortly after

Skeins of silvery filaments drifted out of the sky over a wide area of southeastern New Mexico Wednesday night and Thursday morning. Big globs of the stuff collected on TV antennas and telephone poles.

People here were puzzled.
Dr. William Koster, University of New Mexico biologist, was the first to offer the spider explanation. He offered it tentatively without examining the material.

Now Portales people have searched through books on spiders and are inclined to believe him.

The phenomenon is not uncommon, says one

"but the true explanation is very simple"

That is what Dr. Koster said too. Even so many years, in order to get away from their hungry mammas the little spiders secrete a silk-like substance which acts like a balloon, and wafts the spider vast distances.

A Las Cruces newspaperman added the observation that this is fairly common in his native Louisiana, where it is known as "Grandmothers Veil." In France it is known as Fils de la Vierge, and in Germany as Mari-enfaden, or "Our Lady's Threads." In Portales it had no name except unprint-able ones given it by broomcorn and cotton farmers who said it was a big nuisance.

Children here were inclined to still a more simple explanation. With Halloween only a week away it is time that someone attended to getting the cobwebs out of the sky.

Oklahoma Wins by One Point Up or Down?

Oklahoma, the nation's top-ranked collegiate football team, came within one point of having its 44-game winning streak shattered Satur-day but finally squeaked past Colorado, 14-13, on a come-from-behind surge in the final quarter.

Other major powers such as Iowa, Notre Dame, Michigan State and Army also emerged on top after another hectic round of play but they, too, had to fight for their wins.

Iowa, No. 3, struggled through mud and snow to stay unbeaten with a 6-0 victory over Northwestern; Notre Dame finally decked Pittsburgh with a second-half rally, 13-7; Michigan State also had to come from behind to subdue Illinois,

On the Pacific Coast, Stanford shocked UCLA 20-6, and in a real thriller at the Coliseum Washington State edged SC, 13-12, before a

Bare Announcment Fails to Indicate Marshal's Future

WASHINGTON (AP)-U. S. officials from President Eisenhower down were fascinated and mystified Saturday by Moscow Radio's bare announcement that Soviet Defense Minis-ter Georgi Zhukov had been relieved of his post.

They did not know whether to speculate that he was on his way up to the premiership or lown to possible disgrace and oblivion under the regime of Soviet Communist Party Boss Nikita Khrushchev.

President Eisenhower, who had a military acquaintanceship with Zhukov in Berlin 12 years ago, withheld comment. He was reached at a football game at Annapolis and the report of the radio broadcast caused an obvious flurry of interest in his party.

ZHUKOV WAS relieved of his job as minister of defense without explanation earlier Saturday.

rected at some system for use of present school facilities 12 months a year. By so doing the effect would be to add 25 per cent or more to the number of classrooms now available.

For many years California taxpayers have been voting hundreds of millions of dollars to help school districts which have already reached their bonding capacity. The amount voted in the past 12 years has already exceeded a half billion dollars. Now it seems probable another $200 million will be asked for on the ballot next year.

This writer has supported each state school bond issue in the past. But at the time of the last issue, we stated we doubted we would support another until there was evidence that these poorer districts had plans for greater use of present facilities. There is no end to such subsidies as long as these districts can get more school buildings paid for by the rest of the

One example of a realistic approach to the prob-Iem is that of the University of Pittsburgh. It has just announced a program to extend its school year from two to three semesters. It means the university would be providing full courses for 45 weeks a year instead of the present 35. It means almost a third more students can be handled with the same facilities.

It is pointed out the plan will allow teachers to increase their incomes by being paid for this additiontl 10 weeks. It means students can shorten their university years if they take advantage of the extended time. The saving in building costs is assurance of better pay for teachers.

There is sharp opposition by parents in the secondary and elementary schools. The parents object to changing vacations and having children in school for longer periods. But the economics of the situation are causing many school districts to study plans to take care of the ever increasing school population-while faced with the cold fact that the people are not voting bonds for new buildings.

The past three years have produced more news items on the subject than were produced in the whole of the last quarter century. It is a logical development to change a habit. Our present nine-month school system was originally adopted to allow children to help with the crops. That reason no longer exists—but this apposition to changing established habits is strong. The real test will come in many districts which must have new facilities-or use those they already have to a greater extent.-L.A.C.

Guatemala Elections Held Void

GUATEMALA CITY (U.E) Guatemala's two-day-old military Junta government Satur-day night declared Sunday's presidential elections void and asked Congress to name a provisional president until new elections can be held.

The Junta agreed to the request of defeated presidential candidate Gen. Manuel Ydigoras Fuentes after three days of street rioting by Ydigoras' supporters. The demonstrators claimed former Supreme Court Justice Miguel Ortiz Passarelli won Sunday's election by fraud.

HEAVY RAIN drenched the city for the second night and kept all but a few demonstrators away from the presidential palace, where congress met in secret session to designate a provisional president.

Next in line for the presi-dency under Guatemala's constitution is second designate (vice president) Col. Guillermo Flores Avendano. Y digoras asked that the government be turned over to him.

Ydigoras' demands for new elections were backed by Mario Mendez Montenegro, leader of the recently formed Revolutionary Party which was not al-lowed to put up candidates in the former election.

90 Planes to Fly in Mock Raid

United States theoretically comes under a triple Pearl Harbor attack and then some starting next Wednesday.

Ninety high flying bombers, opening a week of simulated nuclear bombing raids, in theory will blast three target ities-Atlanta, St. Louis and Kansas City, Mo.—off the map

Four of the "enemy" craft will be jet bombers of Britain's Royal Air Force (RAF). . . . .

THEIR PARTICIPATION vill mean, says the U.S. Air Force, that the United States vill be under air attack (simulated) by foreign jet bombers for the first time in its history

Pearl Harbor was an assault lasting only a few hours, executed by propeller-driven aircraft using conventional

By contrast the mock raids tarting Wednesday night based on the devastating power of hydrogen bombs, will involve more than 700,000 miles of mis-sion flying, and 270 bomb drops on each of the three cities.

Black Magic Still Brews

Satan Worship and Voodoo Hold Sway in Modern Times

Beneath modern man's synthetic suit beats a heart as fearful and credulous as his medieval ancestor's. He can split the atom, but often as not, deep inside he still believes in devils.

Today not many people with hex appeal are consigned to the flames for trafficking with Satan. But in Europe from the 15th to the 18th centuries 300,000 to several million accused witches — historians vary — were burned, drowned, hanged, strangled, flayed alive and tortured to

Admittedly, we have made progress.

Many a modern, fingering the rabbit's foot in his pocket as he talks, will insist witchcraft has died out altogether, except perhaps for voodoo among remote, primitive peoples.

The truth seems to be, however, that the darkest practices of black magic have gone underground in civilized societies leaving exposed on the surface a scattering of societies, leaving exposed on the surface a scattering of apparently harmless superstitions.

AN ANTHROPOLOGIST concentrating on European witchcraft, Margaret A. Murray, has written that the god or gods of an old religion become the devil or devils of the new. She advanced the theory that what we call witchcraft was a religion of the people which was eventually overcome by Christianity, although the struggle lasted until the 18th Century.

The worship is governly believed to have centered around a god appearing as a man or animal at the witches' meetings, or sabbaths. High spot of the sabbath was celebration of the black mass, followed by sexual orgies.

The black mass, a blasphemous parody of the Roman Catholic mass—with black candles, inverted crucifix, liturgy mumbled backward and on the altar often the naked body of a female worshipper—is apparently still with us.

Robert Fabian, former inspector of Scotland Yard says
the practice of black magic is spreading rapidly and that there is more active satan worship today than in the Dark

Even in America, some writers on the occult insist, black masses are said, attracting the mentally unbalanced, the perverts, the thrill seekers and once in a long while someone who honestly wants to study what mankind is capable of. But admittance is hard to come by—you have to "know

MORE PREVALENT in this country is voodoo, an African fetish religion that spread to Haiti and around the world. Here it crops up in sections of the South and in the poorer districts of large cities.

Police are familiar with the voodoo conjer bag-containing a mixture of powerful devil-repellants such as graveyard dirt, hair, parts of animals, perhaps human fat—worn around here, hair, parts of animats, perhaps mundar tat—worn around the necks of various petty criminals they've arrested. Psychiatrists at mental hospitals in the New York area say that British West Indians carry voodoo around as a part of their culture and it's sometimes hard to tell where mental illness begins and the belief in black magic leaves off.

In New York City's Harlem, specialists in either putting on bexes, or curses, or taking them off do a brisk trade.

Voodoo covers a multitude of practices-from killing or Voodoo covers a multitude of practices—from killing or maiming an enemy by sticking pins in a doll or slowly melting a waxen image, to making love potions.

Right now in a Vincland, N. J., jail, Juan Rivera Aponte, a 47-year-old farm laborer, awaits trial on a murder charge involving the death of a 13-year-old boy. Police say Aponte told them he had been studying black magic and needed a skull to grind into powicing to use in a potion to enable him. skull to grind into powder to use in a potion to enable him to cast spells on women.

AS FOR VOODOO DEATH, doctors say there are many well documented cases of a perfectly healthy person lying down and dying after being informed he is bewitched and

Most psychologists think suggestion is at the bottom of voodoo success. They say the victim first has to believe in witchcraft, and then be told he will die. He does the rest

Often, too, guilt feelings enter into it. He knows he's done something pretty bad to make someone want his death—and if his simple faith in magic won't snuff out the spark of life, his deep feelings of guilt will.

In America the part of the country often thought the ost witchcraft-prone is the Pennsylvania Dutch farming

So-called hex signs, those colorful geometrical designs on barns and over doorways, are frequently pointed out as magic supposed to keep out devils. Most authorities on the Pennsylvania Dutch, however, insist they're simply decorative. In scoffing at the hex sign myth, one writer admitted magic was practiced in the area, but very secrety. The Pennsylvania Dutch farmer, he said, would never parade his mysterious doings for the uninitiated to see.

A case with a relatively happy ending involved a young Altoona, Pa., wife who was convinced she was being hexed by her dead husband. He had been buried in the Army uni-form he had given his devoted wife. The uniform was her dearest possession.

When his ghost began hovering around the house she was convinced he was angry. As she approached a nervous breakdown seven of her male relatives and the undertaker opened the grave, stripped off the uniform and burned it. After salt was sprinkled on the body to ward off evil spirits, it was wrapped in a clean white sheet and returned to its resting place. Immediately the haunting ceased, and the bloom returned to the widow's cheeks.

Brownell Rated as Washington Sphinx

WASHINGTON—Attorney General Herb Brownell is leaving Washington with exactly the same reputation among reporters as when he arrived—about the closest-mouthed individual of them all.

vidual of them all.

Usually the resignation of a cabinet member is preceded by either news "leaks" or at least by considerable speculation. But news of Brownell's impending departure leaked only two minutes before the formal announcement from the White House and the leak—B gain a typical Brownell maneuver—was obviously intentional. Rep. Manny Celler, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee and a fellow New Yorker, gave out the news just ahead of the official statement.

Herb always was one to keep his mouth shut. When he was New York Gov. Tom Dewey's Campaign manager, one frustrated reporter after trying to get something out of him for half an hour turned and fled.

DRIVER MICKEY THOMPSON brings the test car to a stop over three rubber barricade posts. The car is riding over the first two, in this picture, and is about to hit the third. The first barricade has lifted the rear of the car off the pavement,-(Staff Photos by Don Webster.)

New Rubber Barricades Tested in Traffic Safety

Highway deaths and injuries may be cut in the future by new rubber barriers tested here Friday.

The elastic guard posts being developed by the United States Rubber Co, were demonstrated to a group of safety, traffic law enforcement authorities at the Lions Associated Drag Strip, 223rd and Alameda Sts.

Officials of the rubber company emphasized the project is still entirely experimental.

The tests, however, produced encouraging results,

THE GUARDS USED are hollow rubber posts standing four feet high and anchored firmly in cement. Outside diameter of the posts used Friday was 8 inches with a 3 inch inside diameter

Drag strip manager and race driver Mickey Thompson, firmly strapped into the test car, drove into the posts at speeds from 25 to 45 miles an hour.

The car ran over the springy barricades which popped up behind as soon as it has passed. The posts kept damage to the car to a minimum, definitely slowed it down and, according to Thompson, joited him only slightly.

"THERE WAS practically no shock," Thompson said. I'd be glad to drive into them at 50 without the safety is," he offered. "I think it would be quite safe."

Purpose of the rubber posts is to substitute them for conventional barricades on curves, at freeway interchanges and between opposing traffic lanes.

After more testing to determine just how resilient the posts should be, some may be placed in service in the area

Angels to L.B. Move Gains Momentum

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH

Possible movement of the Los Angeles Dodgers' franchise in the Pacific Coast League to Long Beach gathered momentum Saturday with two important developments:

 Dodger vice president Buzzy Bavisi indicated that he would visit Long Beach to inspect this city's Blair Field, ... unless the press of business on this whirlwind trip West

2. The Long Beach Century Club fired an offer to the Dodgers with plans for a permanent Dodger organization training camp in this area, the site also to be utilized as the home of the Long Beach "Angels."

Bayasi expressed interest in a shift of the Dodgers' PCL club to Long Beach in his first press conference Thursday. Developments of the past 48 hours indicate there are five important reasons why the Dodgers might relocate their PCL team in Long Beach, remembering, of course, that any such move would have to be approved by the Coast League and this is of extreme importance-would be contingent upon the circuit remaining an open classification league.

The reasons why the Dodgers would find it feasible to move the Angel club to Long Beach follow:

important matter of getting swed by the Coast League. (The Coast League is hopeful of securing a large sum in damages from the Dodgers for "invasion" of this territory, but if the Dodgers maintain a PCL club in this area, legal men believe they might not be sucd-or at least not for a great sum.)

2. A move to Long Beach would keep the "little club" "big club" in Los Angeles, The Dodgers want a site close to Los Angeles to maintain a close watch on the open classification club.

3. Fans would have baseball-and good baseball-the summer 'round. The Long Beach "Angels" would play at home only when the Dodgers are on the road. The caliber of players would remain high, since the personnel would be those who are just a shade below major league ball.

4. Long Beach is in the heart of a tremendously fast-growing community. The population is right here, with 1,100,000 people in southern Los Angeles County and Orange County from which to attract fans.

5. Long Beach has a new park,

The park itself.—Blair Field.—has been tabbed by opponents of a Long Beach move as the principal reason why

Bavisi said Saturday that the Dodgers would require "only 6,000 or 7,000 seats" in any park they might settle, but Blair Field's capacity can be expanded to 7,000—or even 10.000—seats. This could be accomplished by the addition of bleacher seats (which would start nine feet from the ground level) just outside the outfield wall and which would encircle

The Century Club informed Dodger President Walter O'Malley Saturday that land was available for construction of a permanent Dodger organization training camp in this ong Beach's sports development organization suggested to O'Malley that a location might be centered in the Long Beach-Orange County area which would have plenty of parking space, hotel or dormitory accommodations, restaurant facilities and a suitable number of playing fields, all new and all devoted exclusively to the Dodgers.

This site also might be considered as a home for the Long Beach "Angels."  $\,$

Meanwhile, the Long Beach "story" was being chanted son wrote from San Francisco that Long Beach was one of five cities mentioned prominently in PCL realignment plan-ning. The others were Phoenix, Salt Lake City, Denver and

He repeated the fact that franchises for Los Angeles and San Francisco, plus Hollywood, must be shifted if the PCL is to remain an open classification circuit.

Phoenix would absorb the San Francisco club, the Giants having bought the Phoenix franchise with the purpose of putting a PCL team there, while Salt Lake City would be the strongest other possibility to obtain the Angel team. Much light should be shed on this situation at the PCL meeting Friday in Sacramento.

In other developments Saturday, O'Malley met with Bill Nicholas, general manager of the Coliseum, and they agreed to continue with studies that might make it possible for major league baseball to be played in the 102,000-seat Los Angeles stadium; and Charley Dressen said he probably "know for sure" Monday whether he would become an assistant to the manager of the Dodgers or accept offers

The football fortunes of the University of Southern Californ.a, once the proud king of col-legiate football, plunged to their lowest ebb here Saturday when the winless Trojans suffered their fifth consecutive defeat in blowing a one-point, 13-12, decision to Washington State in the most sloppily played game of the local season, but the most exciting.

A crowd of 24,902 fans saw the Trojans "achieve" the dunew school record for losing streaks with their poorest ballhandling of the year as they lost the ball six times on fumbles . . . and also their failure to make good on three placekicks.

After the try for the extra point following their first touchodnw in the third period was blocked, the Trojans had another chance to knot the count with 1:33 left to play... But Ed Isherwood's placement for the conversion following SC's second touchdown was wide to the left.
Following recovery of an on-

MR. I. KRIMM of 2416 E. Pacific Coast Highway, Long Beach, writes:

"For the last couple of decades the American public has been subjected to various drives for money for charities and medical research. Disregarding the purposes of these drives, here are some questions: Do the people who conduct the drives ever give out reports to the donors on how the money is disbursed? What are the salaries of the organizations' personnel? Do they ever invite the donors to participate in the planning of these disbursements? Is there any sense in giving money without knowing whether it is used properly or wasted indiscriminately?"

With regard to the last question, the answer obviously is: No.

IF HE WANTS TO GIVE wisely, Mr. Krimm should give to established charities and organizations headed by local people who are available and accountable. Let's look, for example, at Community Chest, which collects for 31 different health, welfare, and youth agencies located right here in this com-

Estimated expenses are submitted annually to the Chest by the various agencies. These estimates come from boards of directors made up of volunteer local citizens who receive no salaries. The proposals are considered by a Chest budget committee which is also composed of local volunteers.

Collected funds go to Chest headquarters. They are checked by volunteer auditors, rechecked by the headquarters staff, and audited by a certified public accounting firm. An accounting firm audits Chest finances at the end of each year. Each member of the Chest board of directors gets a monthly financial statement. The books of the Chest are open to the public for examination at any time, and each year an accounting of funds is circulated through the newspapers, by leaflets, and in public meetings.

Where does the money go? The Community Chest collected $807,112 for the current year. Eighty-nine per cent of the money allocated went to the 31 agencies supported by the Chest. (Largest recipient: youth service, $348,108.) Eleven per cent represented the cost of conducting the campaign, the cost of yeararound administration of the Chest, and the Chest public information program. Salaries accounted for a little more than half of the cost of campaign and administration—a cost, incidentally, which was below the national average for Community-Chest-United Fund operations. And, of course, Mr. Krimm realizes that thousands of his friends and neighbors work many. long hours without pay aiding the staff workers.

Mr. Krimm's questions are perfectly legitimate ones. If more persons took the trouble, as he has, to find out the answers, the work of collecting funds for Community Chest and other bona fide agencies would be a great deal easier.

'The Changing Mood of Washington'

WASHINGTON POST- partisan variety.

The famed Eisenhower "team" of the early and middle 50's is breaking up.

First went George Humphrey, the able Secretary of the Treasury. Then departed Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson, the salty individualist who was never dazzled by four stars and ropes of braid. Now it is Gen. Atty. Herbert Brownell, master politi-cal strategist of the ad-ministration, who is retiring to the private practice of law. There will be others leaving the lineup before the next Presidential campaign. Few cabinet members in any administration have served as long, and on the whole, as capably.

WHAT IS BEHIND the shifts that are taking place? Obviously, a sincere desire to leave Washington.

The Humphreys, Wilsons and Brownells have had "it." But of greater significance is what James Reston of the New York Times calls "the changing mood of Washington." And he might have added—"of the country."

The Eisenhower administration enjoyed unprecedented approval throughout its first administration. It had few critics, other than the purely

But with the President's fumbling of the budget con-troversy, the administration's change of direction with respect to foreign commitments and the feeling that like was no longer giving direction to major policies, strong words of disapproval began to be heard throughout the country.

THEN CAME the Sputnik and the sudden realization by beobre States was trailing Russia in missile development and outer space research.

Moreover, they were not reassured by administration spokesmen who minimized the Russian Sputnik as "a silly bauble" or "a nice scien-tific trick."

Only the Vice President warned that "we could make no greater mistake" than brushing off Russia's accom-plishment. The administration's defense of its policies was to be expected. No President ever villingly concedes his errors. It is human to resist attack, But the change of mood mentioned by Mr.Reston is nevertheless taking place. It is not, however, a voluntary

Ike Will Try in Series of Talks to Halt Anti-Republican Trend

WASHINGTON. — President Eisenhower's decision to take the stump in defense of his administration is a concession to the "for-goodnesssake-do-something" school of thought. The decision is based on the theory that a half dozen speeches by the President in different parts of the country will boost the nation's morale and take its mind off the irritations, fears and misgivings arising out of the political and economic situation as well as the American dilemma in "outer space."

A President' leadership can be constructively helpful, provided it is persuasive and is based on sound policies. But there is very little that can be done when economic ills befall a country—the doom of an incumbent political party is foreshadowed anyway by the business trend.

If the elections were held today, the Republicans would elect less than 100 members of the House—almost as low a number as they had after the 1932 election, when Franklin Roosevelt won his first term. As things look now, it is likely that the Republicans will lose many seats in the Senate in the 1958 elections, and that the Democratic majority in both houses will be the biggest in recent years.

It is, indeed, a political that is causing the President, in the midst of some of the most pressing problems on the national as well as international front, to take time out to go to the country.

While Mr. Eisenhower cannot be a candidate for another term because of the constitutional limitation, he persuaded that he must do something to bolster the Republican party's failing cause. The 1960 presidential cam-paign will be fought on the Eisenhower record no matter who is the nominee of the party.

The 1958 congressional election is bound to introduce a new flock of presidential candidates, and it seems to be in the cards for some governor to be the Democratic nominee next time. Gov. Meyner of New Jersey, Democrat, for in-stance, is being talked about considerably in political circles as a possible presi-dential candidate. He is expected to win in a big way next month in New Jersey, and this will boost his chances for 1960's presidential nomicrats are arguing whether Adlai Stevenson can make it again. Vice President Nixon is still out in front for the Republican nomination.

But the skirmishing in the more immediate contest—the congressional election -- will intensify in the next session of Congress. Republican nominees will be on their own, and so will the Democratic nominees in each district or state.

Can President Eisenhower save the situation? There is little that he can do to alleviate the economic ills of the "readjustment" through which the country is slowly passing. There is more that he can do to offset the propaganda that his administration doesn't stand in high repute throughout the world.

The Eisenhower administration is on the defensive today largely because it has not learned the basic rule of politics, which is that public policies must be defended every day and counteroffensives undertaken constantly lest the battle in the court of public opinion be lost by default.

Local Folk Finally Waking Up to Problem of Land Sinkage?

THERE ARE SIGNS of a developing movement in Long Beach that could do more than a score of legal-sounding briefs and a professional propaganda campaign to awaken concern in state official circles about the subsidence problem here.

People of the community-ordinary citizens-are at last showing some evidence of alarm and determination to. see that constructive steps are taken against the dam-aging land sinkage. Examples of this en-couraging development are the petitions being circulated among Alamitos Bay area residents and another area residents and another adopted by the Apartment House Owners Assn. The Alamitos residents' petitions warn oil companies that they will be held liable for oil production damage to the area. The Apartment Owners' petition calls upon Gov. Knight to make subsidence legislation a matter for urgent consideration at the March, 1958, session of the Legislature.

This is the type of action that gets attention from politicians, who are always sensitive to signs of what is frequently called "grass roots sentiment."

FRANKLY, Long Beach area people have heretofore seemed strangely complacent about the immense damage that is threatened here by subsidence. To be sure, the community's official and civic leadership has been busy on the issue about it. But lacking has been a strong showing of interest from the rank and file of the people here. Perhaps this is because of a feeling that their civic and official leaders were doing the job for them. But politicians who look for popular sentiment aren't impressed by such assumptions, or may not even make them.

When vital hearings on subsidence have been conducted in Long Beach, the spectator section has been occupied mainly by representatives of the oil industry, local of-ficials, politicians and civic leaders. "Aver-age citizens" stayed away, and visiting officials were given no sign that the people of Long Beach were seriously disturbed about a situation that was described to them as threatening catastrophe here.

IF LONG BEACH IS TO get the legislation that is necessary, and if it is to get from the oil industry and various public officials the cooperation required for an effective anti-subsidence program, the people of the city must show, in a positive way, that this is what they want and demand.

On the other hand, a lackadaisical attitude toward the problem by the citizens here will be reflected in just such an attitude by those in a position to take constructive action.

Is any further suggestion needed by the members of the community's hundreds of organizations and by its 350,000 residents?

Four Demo Candidates Ready to Go in '60

WASHINGTON—They won't a admit it officially, but four Democratic candidates have their presidential bandwagons all steamed up and ready to roll. Though the 1960 election is still three years away, they are already sounding out delegates.

1. Sen. Stu Symington of Missouri—he will probably be re-elected to the Senate next year by an overwhelming majority and this momentum may start him rolling toward the White House. The Republicans can't find a candidate willing to oppose him in Missouri. They have even offered to pay Assistant Army Secretary Dewey Short, defeated Missouri congressman, to run against Symington for the Senate, Meanwhile, Missouri's able Gov. Jim Blair has offered to campaign next year for any out-of-state Democrat who'll invite him in or-

He could also offset the new Republican drive to win Negro votes because of his long record as a cham-pion of civil rights. He has also had experience as Sec-retary of Commerce, ambassador to England and Russia, and in many other government posts. The fact that he is one year behind Eisenhower in age is his chief handicap. However, Harri-man's skiing and youthful appearance might help offset the calendar. All that remains is a crushed and sodden mattress

And a memory or two, lonely in the wind,

The memories were made like this: At 15 minutes past 5 on the sunny afternoon of Saturday. Sept. 14. the mattress was warm from the soft sleep of an 11-month-old boy.

Coy Abercrombie was his name, and he had five minutes left to live,

He slept peacefully in the back seat of a car driven by his mother, Mrs. Carolyn Jo Abercrombie, 20. Also in the car with her were her daughter, Pamela, 3, and another son, Ronnie, 1½.

As the car traveled south on Knott Ave. toward their new home at 13582 Chestnut Ave., Westminster, they watched the things that children watch.

And death watched them.

AT 5:19 P. M., a sleek silver sports car turned north on Knott from Garden Grove Blvd. Behind the wheel was 43-year-old Walter Podolak, of 888 Linda Vista Ave., Pasadena. He was going home, and the low-slung car accelerated smoothly as he pressed the throttle.

Ahead, traveling north at 40 miles an hour on the narrow road, was another car, driven by Mrs. Rose Hatcher, 29, of 11561 Santa Marie Ave., Stanton. As he approached, Podolak decided to pass the slower car, and Coy Abercrombie had less than 15 seconds left.

The sports car pulled out into the southbound traffic lanc. Coming toward him, Podolak saw the car driven by Mrs. Abercrombie. His car surged forward, and drew abreast of Mrs. Hatcher.

slammed on his brakes. Less than 200 feet ahead, Mrs. Abercrombie did the same.

Both cars began to skid.

The sports car slid for 25 feet before crossing the white line, cut sharply in front of Mrs, Hatcher, and slid 27 feet more toward a point 1056 feet north of Garden Grove Blvd. Mrs. Halcher braked and swerved to-ward the ditch. There was no shoulder on the northbound lane, and she had no choice.

Mrs. Abercrombie's car skidded for 45 feet, careened along the soft shoulder for 90 feet as she attempted to stop, and then hurtled broadside 53 feet across the road into the northbound lane.

The two cars crashed at 5:20 p. m.

Podolak's car was knocked eight feet backwards by the impact. Mrs. Abercromble's car bounced over his hood and overturned in the eight-foot ditch, facing Seconds later, Mrs. Hatcher's car crashed on top of it. Coy Abercrombie died instantly under the wreckage. So did his brother and sister.

And the memories were born.

Of course, there were questions,

Highway patrolmen measured, and wrote down names and addresses. Statements were taken; reports were written.

questions were asked at a coroner's inquest in Santa Ana on Sept. 20, and Podolak was accused of negligent driving. The same questions will be asked again on Tuesday, when Podolak faces jury trial in Anaheim municipal court on charges of manslaughter.
From the answers, the jury will decide how the accident happened, and who was to blame.

But for Mrs. Abercrombie, and for Podolak, the most important question will never be answered.

Except, perhaps, in their hearts.

The question is "Why?"

Japan Shipbuilding Boom Due to Level

Japan's postwar shipbuilding soom is due to level off when current contracts are fulfilled, according to a Long Beach transportation executive who recently returned from the Orient.

Estimates announced by the Japanese transportation ministry show that both receipts and outlay for the half-year ending Sept. 30 are up about 11 per cent over the preceding six months.

However, points out Capt. C. M. Boyd, president of the Wilmington Transportation Co., pre-depreciation profits are expected to be down about 4.3 per cent, based on analyses of balance sheets of 53 Japanese shipping companies.

JURING HIS TWO-WEEN
Japan visit, Boyd also learned that the Nippon Yusen Kaisha

You give them far more than beautiful music

Like most families, you'll be enchanted by the beautiful tones of the Hammond Organ. You'll delight in its variety and responsiveness.

And, you'll give everyone in your family the opportunity to play. Within a month even those with little or no musical background can be playing lovely selections. Just as thousands of Hammond Organ owners already have.

You'll also find it easier to relax with a Hammond Organ in your home. Your worries and tensions will disappear when you play. A Hammond Organ costs less than many fine pianos. Takes no more space than a small desk. It never goes out of tune and plugs into any electrical outlet. Come in today for full details and a complete demonstration.

A major abdominal operation will be performed in a Cleve-land hospital for the cameras of "Wide, Wide World" (4) at 4 p.m. today as the show takes look at the doctors of the nation.

"The operation is only a part of this 90-minute study of doctor," says producer Tec Rogers, "This will be a human personal story of doctors and not a documentary on medicine We'll get to know a surgeon psychiatrist and a specialist, but we'll focus especially on the general practitioner, a public health doctor and a research doctor."

HOW to BUY A USED CAR

WITH SAFETY AND SATISFACTION

(1) Deal with a concern with a reputation over the years for fair dealing. Be sure the title is clear. Buy a car with only one previous owner. Original owners invariably take better care of their cars. See the maintenance record. Put the car on a hoist and examine it in out and under for signs of wreck or flood damage. Have the car tested on your dealer's Dynamometer. Get a written and signed report of its condition. (5) Consider the difference between your present car and the one you are thinking of buying rather than only its price or the

sure they are not exorbitant.

Remember, the guarantee is no better than the reputation of the dealer you are buying from. See the dependable values listed herewith.

Because of condition, guarantee, price, etc., they are, every one, a plus value!

CHRYSLER WINDSOR

The 1958 Chrysler Windsor four-door hardtop is all new in a lower price range. It features dual headlights as standard equipment, aircraft-type bubble windshields, new power steering, pushbutton TorqueFlite transmission and Torsion-Aire ride. The Windsor is also offered in a two-door hardtop, four-door sedan and station wagons. The entire new Chrysler line will go on display at Long Beach dealer R. O. Gould, 1600 American Ave., Friday.

Come in now for a peek at the '58 Chevrolet!

All you do is stop by your Chevrolet dealer's and ask for a preview. He'll show you a booklet containing advance information about the '58 Chevrolet! Here's just a hint of some of the things you can expect to see:

The 1958 Chevrolet will be completely and spectacularly new. It will be decidedly lower and wider-and much, much longer. It will be built around a new principle in body-frame design.

It will offer an entirely new V8 engine, so radical that it even looks different. This new engine will bring you a new pinnacle of performance and astonishing new smoothness.

The new Chevrolet will have amazing advances in comfort and ride, including Full Coil suspension and, for the first time in the Chevrolet field, the incredible softness of a real air ride.

There will be fabulous style touches—for example, an all-new gull-wing effect in the wrap-back of the rear fenders. The line will also offer two new super models of exceptional luxury, beauty and distinction.

These few highlights are the merest clues to what's new with the new Chevrolet. Stop in at your Chevrolet dealer's and take a peek. You can also place your order for an early delivery. You'll be in the limelight as a '58 Chevrolet-Firster.

It's the power behind the throne that counts. And when the figures tally upwards of 500 million dollars each year, and the industry is the fourth largest in the then it's understandable when Marjorie Carne, super-super reer gal says, "I adore my work."

Her queenly throne is that of fashion coordinator for California Fashion Creators an organization serving more than 375 apparel manufacturers of women, men and children's clothing, all with the California label. And her power is the influence she wields in publicizing West Coast designers and manufac-turers. The 4,000 buyers who attend the two market weeks each year in January and June in Los Angeles and the newspaperwomen who gather the first week in November to view the designers creations, are her loyal subjects, CONVERGING ON the Beverly Hilton Hotel next Sunday, where they will be guests of CFC for a week, will be 100 fashion and women's editors from daily news-papers across the country. They will view during the daylight hours more than daylight hours more 2,000 styles in swimwear sportswear. afternoon and evening clothes. Each day stories will be sent by Western Union by these editors to their newspapers. At the end of each Press Week it is estimated that millions words have been written about California fashions. Is it any wonder Los Angeles County is the second largest fashion center in the world?

Of course, the real power this dynasty is Carne's boss, William Maxfield, who is responsible for the over-all program of CFC. acting as its executive director. "He is the ideal employer," she says, "searching for new ideas and always willing to go along with my suggestions."

MAXFIELD and his petite wife, Nadine, are the dip-lomats of Press Week, He handles all major problems (fortunately there are few because of his staff's efficiency); Nadine is the needle and thread department for the girls and their chief confidante; last year she was acting nurse to several of the editors who were laid low with colds. But as Maxfield says, "We've never lost a fashion editor yet."

The behind-the-scenes operation is almost as complicated as Queen Elizabeth's recent visit. Maxfield and Miss Carne begin planning six months in advance. First they must decide on a hotel that can accommodate the editors, provide facilities for wiring stories, have large conference rooms available for the 10 or 15 fashion shows each day, and dressing rooms for the models. After this is out of the way, they after-hour they formulate the hour "fun" events — as trips to movie

Since it is impossible for all members of CFC, to show during the week, Miss Carne spends a great deal of her time attending resort openings, visiting with the designers, and discussing current trends in women's wear: committee decides which firms will be represented.

MISS CARNE'S next job is to write a general trend story, accompanied by fashion pictures, which is sent to each editor in advance. In addition, she writes a fashion story on each collection, arranges for seven or eight photographs of the same; these are given the editors each morning prior to the shows for that day.

Socialites to Wine, Dine at Headdress Ball Saturday

By JOYCE KENT

Long Beach today is reminiscent of the nation's capital a few weeks ago as socialites here duplicate efforts of Washingtonians to find "just the right dress" for the grand ball.

While Washington's tizzy was inspired by the visit of Queen Elizabeth, Long Beach socialites have been shooping in anticipation of the season's outstanding local social event, the seventh annual Headdress Ball next Saturday night in the Lafayette Hotel Grand Ballroom. Sponsored by Long Beach Auxiliary to the Southern California Symphony Assa., the event promises fabulous gowns to match the evening's headdresses and golden decor inspired by the theme of "Le Bal International.'

Leading the fashion parade will be Mrs. Albert Stevenson, ball chairman, wearing a finely pleated hand-woven black Irish linen ball gown with voluminous floor-length white satin stole, both made for her in Dublin, Ireland, by Sybil Connolly.

MR. AND MRS. Stevenson will entertain at cocktails for a large group of friends in the hotel's Red Velvet Room prior to the ball.

Among those included on the invitation list are Messrs. and Mmes. Kenneth Wing Mrs. Wing (will wear a silve and blue lame ball gown with silver blue mink stole). Francis Heusel (waltz-length gold and green brocade with white ermine cape), Francis Hertzog Sr. (ankle-length powder blue lace with ranch mink wrap), James W. Wood (white peau de sole fullskirted hall gown and azurene mink stole), Henry Clock

BECAUSE SHE is a real out-door type, Jeanne Camp-bell's suits and sports clothes reflect her love of freedom and comfort. Whenever her arduous schedule permits, Miss Campbell spends hours in the sun, thus preserving her enviable tan. Dark hosiery shades are the only ones she finds becoming on her well-browned legs. "Many other women," she says, "with similar tans will welcome the wider selection of dark colors as they choose

ALL THE old familiar places will be filled with all the old familiar faces at Wilson High School next Friday when Homecoming Day rolls around for 1937. It's to be on the grand scale this year, spotlighting, in particular, the class of '32 which will be celebrating its silver anniversary. The fun will start at noon.

Other classes will be especially honored, too, on the skip every five years basis and for each class there's a follow in charge. Rounding up the class of '27, for instance, is Cliff Meyer. The 1932 crowd is being exhorted to be there by Norman Masterson; class of '37—Lincoln Ball; class of '42—Richard Menney. Loren Evans; class of '47—Richard Mannex; and class of '52—Jim Johnnie. It's a crime to let the cat out of the bag

The items on this week's activities calendar at Long Beach State make for quite a diversified program. For instance, there's the All Greek Pledge Dance in the Soroptimist House at 8 p. m. tomorrow

The Delta Zetas are sponsoring the event, decorations follow the Halloween theme, and the dress is sport except that hosting pledges will wear heels—to raise them high enough so their guests can find them in the crowd, we're

Two hundred people are expected to be on hand to dance to records and partake of refreshments consisting of Coke and 720 homemade cookies—that's four dozen cookies times 15 DZ pledges, in case you are curious as to the above figure.

THE NEXT NIGHT, the Foreign Language Club holds open house at the same Soroptimist House from 7 to 10 p.m. Refreshments will be served, and guests will have plenty of time to become acquainted with members during the social

Jeanie Hodges is chairman for this big get-together where key personnel in all student groups at State come to know each other better. ON FRIDAY, SIGMA CHI NU, nurses' fraternity, will initiete 10 new pledges in a ceremony starting at 7 p.m. in the Soroptimist House.

Mrs. Irene Maurer, chairman of the pledge and ritual committee, and Dr. Karl A. Russell Jr. will conduct the cere-mony, with Mrs. Virginia Connor, Mrs. Esther Eyman, and Doris Gallion assisting. Refreshments and a social hour will follow.

* CLOSING OUT the week. Saturday sees a trio-Eleanor Henderson. Laura Sinclair and Sharon Green—being initiated into Zeta Tau Alpha in a ceremony beginning at 8 a.m. at the home of Mrs. A. A. Carey, 3944 Olive Ave.

Following the morning ritual. Long Beach Alumnae will give a luncheon at 1 p.m. in the Petroleum Club in honor of new initiates and alumnae initiates.

Recently, ZTA pledges presented gingerbread men, decorated with appropriate colors and Greek letters, to pledges of the fraternities on campus.

And still on the Zeta Tau Alpha front, congratulations to Carolyn Poyet who was recently named outstanding Zeta at Long Beach State. The award was made by the Southern California Federation of ZTA and was based on scholastic achievement, service to the sorority, and participation in campus activities.

If you have ever toured with an opera company, especially in England, where it rains every day, nine months out of the year, you will know that life can be very drab. Were it not for the dazzling lights of the theater and the joyous sound of long applause, the experience of being an opera sin would be unbearable. an opera singer

At 6 o'clock, the principal Bingers performing that evening would gather in the cavern-like dining room of the Midlands Hotel to partake of a semblance of dirher. Nerves were too taut to really enjoy anything--but on the advice of my leacher, Jean de Reszke, Laiways ordered a steak and a cup of tea. At such times I often had the company of my fa-vorite conductor. Sir John Barbirolli (he was not knighted when I was with the company). He seemed like a young 20-year-old, although schually be was 26 years of age. He asked me once: "Do you remember the first words you spoke to me? Lauris Jones, talented young conductor in his second season with the symphony, was recently made an honorary member of the Long Beach Auxiliary of the Southern California Symphony Association. He will direct 85 accomplished musicians in the premiere per-formance for this season, and as is usual with this progressive conductor of Long Beach's own orchestra, he has programmed interesting works new to this community with popular favorites from the classical repertoire.

JEAN KUHNS, brilliant pianist who has appeared in the chamber music series at the museum of art, will be featured artist in Cesar Franck's Symphonic Variations for Piano and Orchestrans for Plano and Centes tra, Continuo parts for Con-certo Grosso by Stanley, a contemporary of Handel, will be played by Nicolas Fur-janick and Alex Leber, violins; Allayne Armstrong, vio-loncello; and Nelson Keyes, STORY-TELLING remains a favorite form of entertainment as one listens to ips of authors and talented readers interpreting great literature. The Public Library suggests these recent titles for unusual pleasure: "Edna Ferber Reading 'The Gay Old Dog' "; Kiping The Gay Old Dog ; Nij-ling, "How the Camel Got His Hump," etc., read by Garry Moore; Maugham, "The Three Fat Women of An-tibes" and "Giglo and Gigoletto." read by the author; Poe "Tales of Horror," read by Nelson Olmstead; Porter "Flowering Judas," read by the author, and Steinbeck, "The Snake" and "Johnny Bear," read by the author.

Eddie Cantor has recorded a new album titled "The Best of Eddie Cantor." It is the first newly recorded package plane. Others works to be presented include Beethoven's Eighth Symphony and Tchaikowsky's Romeo and Juliet

A more current cultural project we found one evening at the Teatro Quirino where Vittorio Gassman, ex-husband of Shelley Winters, remember he also appears in War and Peace, put on a performance dealing with the art of the actor called "A Flea in Your Ear." He was assisted by a troupe of vigorous young people and the scene was an after-the-theatre actors' par-

DEAR ABBY: I am a widower of 63 who is interested in a nice widow woman. She is very good company and we get along fine. Her children are grown and so are mine. I have told her straight out that I was 63, but she never says how old she is. She looks to be about 58 or 60. I could get matrimonial about her but I wonder if you think I should ask her how old she is. It doesn't really matter but I am curious.—CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: If it doesn't matter - don't ask her. If she tells you, add five and marry her anyway,

DEAR ABBY: I am in love with a girl and want to marry her but my parents are trying to break it up because we are of different religions. I don't think they have any right to object because my parents do not practice their own religion and rarely go to church themselves. My girl is devout in her faith and I am not, but I know our love is strong enough to make a our marriage even though she goes to her own church and I go to mine. Do you think my parents are being fair, Abby?—PHIL S. DEAR PHIL: Parents who do not practice their own re-ligion should not be surprised when their children want to marry out of their faith. Your parents' objections are sound, however. The family that prays together - stays

DEAR ABBY: My husband looks forward to going trout fishing all year, Last year my girlfriend said she saw him in Reno, whooping it up, but I didn't believe her. This year before he left, I taped his fishing line to his reel. After three days, he came back with his limit of trout which I am sure he must have bought in a trout farm because when I looked at his reel it was still taped the way I fixed it. What do you make of this?—C. M.

FRA Ladies Chief Home

Official duties still occupy Mrs. Louis H. (Mary) Murray's time, even though she is home after a year's tour of auxiliary units affiliated with the Ladies Auxiliary of the Flect Reserve Assn. As national president, Mrs. Murray visited 142 auxiliaries in the United States, Hawaii and Philippine Islands. Her home here is at 2846 Vista St.

She returned to her "home port" to preside at the national convention taking place here in Municipal Auditorium through Tuesday. The women convention members will join the men today aboard the USS Philippine Sea for ceremonies.

SOME OF Mrs. Murray's experiences during a tour included placing a wreath on the USS Arizona in Pearl Harbor; attending memorial services at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and the mast of the battleship Maine at Arlington Cemetery; being invited to tea with President Eisenhower and attending a convention caucus in the Philippines,

Five Trumps Fail to Set

Since becoming president of the American Contract Bridge League, J. G. Ripstra of Wichita has become quite conservative in his bidding on the theory that it is un-dignified for the president to be set.

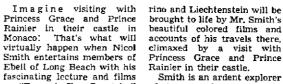

His failure to bid seven with today's hand must be ascribed to this conservatism but with trumps breaking five-zero it took very good play to bring even the small slam home.

Rip won the opening spade lead with the king and played the ace of trumps. West the ace of trumps. West showed out and Rip was mighty glad he had not bid seven. He studied the hand and noted that he could make the small slam if East could not trump in too soon on his high cards in the side suits

Rip cashed his acc of spades and continued with three rounds of clubs. the third club he got r his last spade.

The ace and queen of dia-monds were taken next and dummy's last spade led and trumped.

East was now down to trumps but it did him no good. Rip led a diamond and ruffed with dummy's king The last club was now played and East could ruff high or

Crown Prince of Garb Leaders in

By TED KREC

On the Southern California front, Knute Thorsen is the biggest gun in the constantly raging battle against the Society of the Lazy or Backward, rank and file members of which are known as SLOBs.

Thorsen is executive direcof MAGIC and BAGIC, Men's Apparer Guild in California and Boys' Apparel Guild in California, and holds forth in neat, modern offices at 740 S. Broadway, Los Angeles.

A truly dynamic personality, Thorsen is interested keenly in clothing trends. And right now, he's also pretty burned up.

"I think it's a disgrace the way our young people look," he told me, "In some of our schools today boys dress in sloppy fashion, their clothes are not clean and they wear those ridiculous haircuts. Even some of the girls look pretty sad. They wear pedal pushers to school, if you can

Knute knows whereof he speaks, for he's a native of Los Angeles and was schooled at L. A.'s Polytechnic High.
"And there's another thing."
he said. "It was different when I went there. They didn't wear things like they do today. The school authorities were rigid—and, incidentally, you could have eaten off the floor in Poly High, it was so clean!"

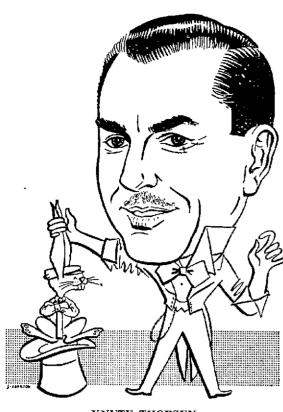

IS THERE A SOLUTION? "You bet there is!" Thorsen thundered. "A lot of it could start in the home; but the bulk of it could be done through the schools. The schools could require that if these young people are going to be class or activity leaders that they have to dress well. Make them put their shirts inside their trousers, wear decent haircuts, get their clothes cleaned and have their shoes shined. If they go to a dance, make them wear coats. But you can't start in the last year of high school, you have to catch them early in grammar school."

Waxing philosophical, Knute added: "We have to do something. Would you hire a kid who looked like they a kid who looked him look today? I wouldn't hire them to clean up the place:

Thorsen has devoted his adult life to the clothing business. He was manager of the Pendleton Woolen Mills in Los Angeles for 11 years, leaving only because the firm wanted him to go to Omaha. In 1948 he was president of MAGIC, then took over the executive directorship.

With MAGIC-BAGIC his task is to beat the drums for better dressing and to pro-mote the California market. To help accomplish this he organization stage two market weeks a year, in May and October.

KNUTE THORSEN He's the MAGIC Man!

"PLENTY OF styles originate in California," said "For example, the sport shirt, Also, California is the leader in swim wear. And do you remember the Balboa Another California

As for trends, Thorsen agrees that the Ivy influence still is holding the men's fashion world in a strong grip, but he believes that in another six months or so we will see a trend away from Ivy again,

The double-breasted suit? Knute says the return of this style will be a very slow process, although some of the old-style, wide-lapel doublebreasted suits still are seen on the street and on television.

"And, you know what? Television could do a lot toward promoting the correct attire for men. Performers should appear in correct dress at all times—they owe it to the public; but, un-fortunately, there seems to

HAND-SHAPED'

Thorsen is no "ivory tower" dreamer, he's a realist. His hard - hitting publicity re-leases on men's fashions show this to be true. And don't forget his idea on better attire starting in the school, Sounds far fetched? Then how do you account for the dignity in dress prevalent among many parochial school students? It can be done, it MUST be done if we are going to defeat the menace of the SLOBs!

Of Course It Can Work!

DEAR MRS. MAY-

If anyone had told me six months ago that I would be writing you, I would have advised him to see a psychiatrist.

Till then I was one of those fortunate people who never had a problem that could not be worked out satisfactorily by myself or with my parents' help. Now I have a genuine problem, and here it is sim-ply: I am 22 and in love with n man nearly 50. He shares this love, although perhaps not quite with such youthful intensity,

More than anything, I want to marry him. But...

"It this right?"... "Could I make him happy?"... these are questions that trouble me. This man has long been a good friend of my parents. But because we live at opposite ends of the California coast, the friend-ship has been one of a state of heart and mind rather than of day-to-day contact.

He has been a widower two years, has a fine son of 12 who has been affected deepmother. While his wife was living, I wasn't awars of any feelings other than admira-tion for him. My path of love is the kind that gradunlly has changed a little girl's hero worship into a young woman's love.

Now about myself. . . . I have been blessed, indeed!
Beauty, luxury, experience that comes from being one among seven children, a col-lege graduate. He, by the way, is a successful and highly prosperous lawyer.

I have given men my own age a chance at my heart ... fraternity pins, propos-als. But all I wanted of them, I found, was a pleas-ant friendship. Nothing more until this real love came into my life.

If you advise me against this marriage, I can't say truthfully I'll follow your advice. But I would like to hear what you've learned from experience.

I'd like to know if you personally feel this marriage would have a chance, K. H. D. DEAR K. H. D.:

Of course, it would have chance. There are lots of May-December—or, in your case, May-October—marriages that have been genuine and lasting love affairs One of the first problems that was put to me when I started this column 15 years ago was much like yours. I told the young woman (21) that under the circumstances she had outlined, I thought her marriage to a middle-aged widower (46) had a good chance of succeeding.

They married. She is now 36, he 61, and a letter several weeks ago said they have had a wonderful life together,

The important thing, it seems to me, in joining a marriage of this kind is that both parties fully recognize that it is not the normal, average kind of young love marriage. Therefore, it offers problems all its own. Among these:

1. That it will start out being a more settled, sober marriage than the average happy-go-lucky romance of young couples.

2. That the passionate excitements probably will be fewer and, on the other hand, the inevitable domestic squabbles will be less fiery.

3. That one will become an old man when the woman reaches the flower of her early middle years.
4. That if children do come, they will reach their teen years when the father touches the retirement age, and they will not know the active companionship of more average-age families.

These are, of course, emo-tional obstacles to such a marriage. But, if knowing this, as I think you do, you this, as I fink you do, you still want to marry this man, then I say go ahead with it. And may it be a life-long love affair, M. M.

a widow or widower when they desire to marry a second time.

Instead, it actually is a compliment to their dead mate. For it shows that their former marriage was so happy and inspiring that they are willing to wed again in the hope of recapturing some of that previous joy.

When compatible people like Minnie and this widower fall in love, they will enjoy life far more if they marry.

Marriage also extroverts one's thinking. Married folks tend to be more unselfish and considerate, for we are then trained to think of the wishes of our mate, in addition to our own selfish de-

Remarriage is medically healthful, too, for married folks live longer than, the unmarried.

And they feel happier meanwhile for they know they have somebody else in the house to talk to, and who will look after them if they are sick. That is a very reassuring thought,

And in such cases, the elderly person is not as likely to be a burden on his or her children, for the mate can tend to the needs of the bedfast member of the team.

Furthermore, there is no date line with reference to love, even of the physical sort, so remarriage is stimulating to the endocrine secretions and proves a tonic to both the body as well as the

Stratojet Wonderland

Ву S. Sgt. Earl Erickson

HERE are children's stories by the duzens on television, radio and in books that open the realm of makebelieve to vivid young imaginations. These stories may be good ones, but they have lost some of their power to compel the delighted attention of Ricking Prickson.

ompel the delighted attention of Ricki and Steven Erickson.

Nephews of the author. Ricki and Steven eagerly welcomed his many weekend visits to Long Beach, plying him with questions about the Air Force and the giant jet planes. Then one day recently the boys were asked to spend a day with their uncle at March Air Force Base. To adventurous youngsters, this was almost as exciting as an invitation into the lair of a squadron of friendly, fairy-tale dragons.

How would you feel, if you were eight, or even five years old and sat behind the wheel of a long jet bomber? Especially if you had gone out into the bright morning of preflight inspection on the flight line wearing your own big, white Air Force helmet?

RICKI AND STEVEN are two of the three sons of Jamie and Valerie Erickson of 6759 Parapet SL. Long Beach, Baby Kirk Erickson, not quite a year old, was too young to enjoy the day's activities, but Mom and Dad enjoyed the tour of the Strategic Air Command base every bit as much as the older boxs.

Nowadays, rather than the story of the little train engine that kept saying, "I think I can, I think I can...", Ricki and Steven demand tales of a confident B-47 Stratojet bomber that roars, "I know I can..." The lads have even announced their intention of resigning from school and entering the Air Force.

announced their intention of resigning from school and entering the Air Force.

If dreams come true and sometimes they do Ricki and Steven Erickson will be flying a really and truly airplane one of these days.

The Birth of Women's Suffrage

By Harry Karns

AITHFULLY EVERY election day, Mrs. Ruth Biles, a Cathedral City real estate broker, walks to her precinct polling place and casts her vote. It is a right she holds in common with 53 million other American women, but she considers it-in a sensea family affair.

The nation's first female vote in a general election was cast 87 years ago by Mrs. Biles' great-grand-

Behind that vote is a dramatic tale of the American frontier. For it was in the West, on the ragged edge of civilization, rather than in the tea pariors of the East, that woman's suffrage was born.

The story has its start in a blizzard in Wyoming Territory on a night in the early spring of 1869.

WILLIAM H. BRIGHT, settler in South Pass and tember of the Territorial Legislature, wondered why fate had decided to make this the night.

A sharp-edged wind cut across the land, and the walls of the little shack trembled under the impact of sudden gusts. Snow piled high in the valley. And Mrs. Bright was in labor.

South Pass had no doctor. He headed for the home of his nearest neighbor, Mrs. Esther Morris. He half expected that she would refuse to go back with him, and in such weather he wouldn't blame her.

The wind gathered force, and he had to lower his head and ram into it. He arrived at the Morris shack covered with ice and nearly frozen. Mrs. Morris answered his knock told her: "Betty's going to have her baby. I

WITHOUT HESITATION Mrs. Morris said: "Warm here at the fire, Mr. Bright, while I get bundled up."

Within 15 minutes Bright and Mrs. Morris were in the storm and headed toward the Bright shack. They clutched the ends of a piece of rope to keep from getting lost from one another in the howling

Struggling through the blizzard with Mrs. Morris, Bright thought of the courage and strength of the relatively few women who came into the rugged West with their men. In almost every case, these women carried their own weight in a so-called man's world.

That was more than he could do in a woman's world, he admitted an hour later.

When they got to his shack, he stood around, help-less and confused, while Mrs. Morris tended his wife. At the height of the blizzard, the baby was born. Mrs. Morris sat through the night caring for mother and child, cooked breakfast for the Brights, then went home to cook breakfast for her own family.

"MRS. MORRIS," SAID BRIGHT before she headed through the drifts left by the departed blizzard, "I don't know how I'll ever repay you."

She answered: "Oh, I'll be asking a favor of you one day, Mr. Bright."

Mrs, Morris had taken an intense interest in the political and social affairs of the Territory. She had long sought to advance female rights, particularly female suffrage. Before Bright left later in the year for the legislature, she asked him the favor.

Bright paid his debt.

HE INTRODUCED THIS revolutionary bill in the Territorial legislature:

"Be it enacted by the council and the House of Representatives of the Territory of Wyoming: "Section 1. That every woman at the age of 18 years residing in the Territory may, at every election to be held under the laws thereof, east her vote. And her rights to the elective franchise and to hold office shall be the same under the elective laws of the Territory as those of electors."

Mrs. Ruth Biles (left), formerly of Long Beach but now of Cathedral City, and her daughter, Mrs. Fern Holliday, of Los Angeles, inspect a story in an old copy of the Long Beach Press-Telegram which led to discovery that they are direct descendants of America's first female voler, Mrs. Eliza A. Swain (above). Mrs. Swain cast the vote Sept. 6, 1870.

It turned out that many of Bright's colleagues felt the same way he did about Wyoming women. One delegate climaxed his argument on the measure with this statement.

delegate climaxed his argument on the measure winths statement;
"If consideration is given to disfranchise half of our people, it should not be the better half."
Bright began to believe that the chivalry and conscience of Wyoming's all-male territorial legislature might open the door to political equality for American women. He turned the keeping of a promise into a cause. A shrewd strategist, he played one party a cause. A shrewd strategist, he played one parly against the other, warning each against taking the responsibility for defeat of a bill that had broad public support. They heeded the warning.

THE BILL PASSED WITH minor changes and was signed by Gov. John A. Campbell. Thus on Dec. 10, 1869, in Wyoming Territory, women were granted equal voting rights for the first time in American history.

Under the new law, by the way, Mrs. Morris was appointed as the first female justice of peace in history. She had delivered for Bill Bright. Now be delivered for bell Bright. livered for her.

Meanwhile, on Sept. 6, 1870, a woman described in Wyoming archives as "a gentle white-haired house-wife, Quakerish in appearance," arrived early in the morning at the polls in Larannie. To give her the distinction of height the first many in the rate of a senmorning at the pous in Laranne, to give ner the distinction of being the first woman to vote at a general election, officials opened the poils earlier than usual. The woman, Mrs. Eliza A. Swain, 75, cast her ballot, pulled her shawl about her shoulders, smiled something and multiple heres to have bounded choices.

serency, and walked home to her household chores.
That was Mrs. Biles' great-grandmother-the great-grandmother of women voters.

TWENTY-ONE YEARS AFTER the casting of the first hallot, Wyoming became a state and retained the equal sulfrage clause in its constitution. The movement spread among other western states and ter-ritories and traveled to the East, where efforts to establish women's suffrage had been intense but (Continued on Page 12.)

He's Spent $21 Million--Just for Fun!

By Vera Williams

LAST WEEK the 9,474,254th visitor walked through the gates of Disneyland since they were opened July 18, 1955.

And just for fun—that these visitors might have the time of their lives—$21 millions have been spent on the fabulous playground at Anaheim by its creator, Walt Disney.

That's not all. Says Disney:

"Disneyland never will be completed. . . . It will continue to grow, to add new things, as long as there is imagination left in the world."

Imagination—that flair of Disney's to project himself back to the interests of childhood and forward to the untouched horizons of science—makes going to Disneyland an unforgettable experience.

NINETY PER CENT of the visitors polled say that they are going back.

"If every world leader could be made to go to Disneyland, there would be no more wars," commented a recent visitor. And the visitor may have spoken the truth: Disneyland has a carefree, happy quality that would rule out war.

Every one who walks Disneyland's streets, or travels on its trains, or rides behind its clop-clopping horses becomes a child again, with a child's wonder at the beautiful, the fantastic, and the enticing world-around-the-corner.

The dedication plaque located in Town Square at Disneyland sels forth the park's founding principle: "A place for people to find happiness and knowledge."

Happiness is inherent; knowledge is acquired joyously in this place where fantasy and imagination are companions with history and a concrete visualization of the future.

AN HONEST-TO-GOODNESS castle, stroight from the land of dreams and the pages of history, is approached over a medieval drawbridge. One stops to admire the white and black swans swimming in the moat, until the small fry tug to the music of a King Arthur carrousel. Prancing horses carry 72 young knights and their ladies on a merry-go-round ride on which every rider imagines himself a hero or a princess.

Beyond the carrousel is the Mad Hatter's Tea Party where guests spin in a cup and saucer while the Mad Hatter and March Hare debate furiously atop a sugar bowl. To one side, Dumbo, guided by his friend and manager, Timothy Mouse, soars aloft carrying his friends for an aerial ride.

The Casey Jr. Train—as nearly human as a train can get—almost laughs out loud as it pulls circus cars of merry riders up hill and down dale and over the Canels of the World.

In the Snow White wing of the castle an adventurous ride is taken through the Diamond Mine with Seven Dwarfs.

A NARROW-GAUGE RAILROAD, exact in every detail to the old Santa Fe steam engine, passenger and freight ears, circles Disneyland. Tiny ponies, burros and mules—special stock bred for the park—haul old fashioned horsecars in addition to Conestoga wagons and buckboards.

The Mark Twain, a stern-wheel steamer of the 1800s, plies one of the seven bodies of water.

Gates of Adventureland open on Tahitian settlement surrounded by tropical flowers, birds and fish.

Explorers' boats churn through tropical waters of Mexico, Central and South America, Africa, Asia and Australia. Sharp-eyed passengers can spot wild animals by the dozen. Made of plastic, they move, roar and slither along the banks of the rivers.

Frontierland, fronted by a massive log stockade and inhabited by leatherstocking frontiersmen and Indians, boasts an 1850 Western settlement with boardwalk streets, harness shop, general store. Also there is a Wells Fargo station and a stagecoach trip through the Painted Desert.

SYMBOLIZED BY A HUGE SPACE rocket and a city, Tomorrowland, circa 1986, provides boats and cars of the future. A space terminal allows the adventurous to board a passenger rocket for a trip to the moon. Fortunately, the fare pays for the returning as well as the going.

Those nostalgic for the turn of the century love an old-fashioned ice cream parlor with chairs with wire legs, an old-fashioned apothecary shop, an oldfashioned general store.

Keeping Disneyland in operation takes an average of 2,000 employes. Of these, 1,400 are on the Disney payroll, the remaining 600 hired by lessees in the various shops and exhibits.

Total annual payroll now exceeds $8 million a year.

Disneyland originally represented an investment of 17 million dollars. The present figure of more than $21 million includes $1,800,000 in additions and improvements this past summer.

And what of the future? Remember that Walt Disney said "Disneyland never will be completed.... It will continue to grow... as long as there is imagination left in the world."

ON DISNEY'S PLANNING BOARDS are a "Liberty Street" which will depict the story of early America and the Revolutionary War period; New Orleans Square, with a haunted house, wax museum and thieves' market; Science Land, aimed to interest young men and women in science careers; Thomas Edison Square, which will contrast the home of Edison's time with the home of today and tomorrow, pointing up what Thomas Edison did to make these changes; and a 300-foot diorama of the Grand Canyon.

These "Future Development" projects will be in operation by the summer of 1960, says Walt Disney—maybe before that.

Disneyland—sprawling empire of fantasy and fun—has been visited by almost 10 million people since gates opened in 1955.

PEAR MISS RULE: Please tell the origin of the name KELLER from Germany. --M.K.M., Long Beach; -E.M.K., McAllen, Texas.

M.K.M. AND E.M.K.: KEL-LER is a German occupational name. Baronial castles and manor houses in the Middle Ages (11th to 16th centuries) usually had wine cellars. A "Keller" was a temperate, trusted man who not only kept the casks of wine and liqueurs in good repair, but he portioned out their contents to the household and the guests. MRS. L.C.: The American abbreviation of the German surname Leonhardt is LENHART. Long ago the prevailing custom in Central Europe was to eulogize battle heroes with names that characterized their bravery, much as we do today. Leon-Hardt honored and designated a German soldier, "with the strength of a lion." This family achieved a coat-of-arms in the north German city of Frankfurt-Am-Main. Their red shield has two silver fish for an emblem on it.

If YOU have not won your forlune on a ry qu.z program but would stat like a unition dollars in gord, opportunity keeps right on knocking at your door. You gon't have to rook for a lost mine or a about treasure, whose causive location has been a solid block between the hunted and the hunter. The Big Crevice is located below Murders Bar on the American River, near Nothern Califorlina's old mining camp of Woods Dry Diggin's.

In 1850, after the rich deposit of gold had been washed from the gravels of the American River, a group of miners decided that by diverting the stream from its channel they could work the gravel and obtain the gold normally covered by water. They formed an association to build a hume to carry the water three miles along the cliff of the mountainside.

A man named Morgan represented a group of five gold seekers whose claims were below Murders Bar, In working their claims Morgan discovered the Big Crevice, a crevasse about 12 feet wide and extending back under the south bank of the river to form a cave.

TWO FEET of river gravel was removed from the surface of the crevice and a blue silt was found "which cut like cheese under a knife." Each bucket of the silt was more than half gold dust, producing $1,400 in gold. (Gold was selling at $16 an ounce; at today's price, this amount would be doubled.) The secret of the rich strike was necessary to place armed guards and maintain huge fires to light the area to keep fellow miners from helping themselves to the treasure.

Although Morgan enlarged his crew, there was still a waiting list of men eager for work because, by the end of each shift, the hi-graders would plaster themselves and their clothing with all the blue mud that would stick to them. When this was panned out, the men often obtained many times their wages in gold dust.

THE CREVICE was worked to a depth of 8 feet by having 12 men form a bucket brigade, while one of them obtained the rich mud from the bottom. After one of the bucket carriers disappeared into the brush it was necessary to place an armed guard over all men who handled the buckets. In the excited fever of this rich gold strike, there is no doubt that a large amount of the mud went "over the hill" and into saloun keepers' tills in return for a swig of hard liquor.

After working the crevice for five days, with the aid of a night shift of bailers, with light from pine torches, the flow of water could not be lowered to permit the man with the bucket to reach the mud at the bottom. The project was abandoned but with no regrets for the men had more gold than any of them were to see again.

IN 1851, a crevice company was incorporated in San Francisco where stock was sold with ease as the fabulous stories of the richness of the strike were retold. A barge was built on the river, and an engine was shipped by boat to Sacramento where it was necessary to dismantle it before a conveyance could be found large enough to haul it through the mud to Woods Dry Diggin's. Again it was necessary to dismantle the engine before it could be loaded on mules to be hauled to the site of the Big Crevice. The powerful engine was mounted on the barge and all hands were anticipating the many pleasures that wealth would bring.

The operation began by driving a large steel casing into the crevice to a depth of 90 feet. It was capped, for use as a bailer to bring the rich silt to the surface. The cables, when tightened, snapped, but not a brow wrinkled. For wasn't this the most powerful steam engine in the West? The cables were spliced and the engine was once more put to the task of raising the casing. The engine puffed and heaved and with a roaring blast, it blew to bits and was no more. The casing was raised emply, the castles in the clouds vanished, the gold and revice remained. The river's mad rush soon erased the man-made scars.

THE NEXT YEAR, when the water was low, a small retaining dam was constructed to divert the river and again mentried to work the Big Crevice. They worked the south bank and into the cave. When the surface gravel was removed the blue silt was found to be much richer than any previous removed. At the depth of 30 feet, with 30 men removing water in a bucket brigade, the man on the bottom managed to scoop up the blue silt. At last, the crevice scemed to be conquered when a large slab of limestone fell, burying five men. The Big Crevice once again had defended her hoard of gold,

Several years later a new company was formed, A steampowered dredge was built, with an endless belt, with attached buckets, to dredge the mud into a sluice box. There the gold was to be recovered. The latest in steam pumps was forged in San Francisco and transported to the site of the dredge. The equipment was placed and the dredge towed to its location over the Big Crevice. Wood was fed to the furnace and fired. As steam pressure was being built up, the company waited with empty buillion sacks ready for the glittering dust,

THE BIG MOMENT arrived and the buckets turned in their endless path. The pumps functioned, but after several days of operation only the surface gravel had been removed with the golden treasure still far below. The equipment was shattered, broken and bent. The buckets had fallen from the belt, the pump was broken and clogged with river gravel. High water threatened to take the dredge down river. One night a guyline snapped, causing the craft to capsize and ending efforts to recover the golden hoard.

After 1880, history ceased recording events at the Big Crevice. The millions in gold are supposedly still there for the taking. But remember: it takes more than the pick, shovel and gold pan that the Forty-Niners had.

Only Godfrey Ever Had It Like This

After both emoting beats tub scene in view of Martha Hyer, caught here in only towel on "My Man Godfrey" set. She does towel-clad scene in the film.

ET ALL those other glamour dolls of the movies squirm with joy over a chance to play a bathtub scene. Martha Hyer says they can't compare with the eye-appeal of after-bath emoting.

In Universal-International's "My Man Godfrey," the brilliant blonde from Fort Worth does an 8-minute scene with David Niven while she's clad only in a bath towel. Her efforts to remain covered in front of the camera will have wishful males breathless in anticipation of something that really can't happen because the censors frown on such things.

"THERE ARE BIG advantages to the towel over the tub," Martha insists, "In the dunking scenes a gal is up to her ears in soap bubbles. In a towel scene she covers what

It was not until 1919 that nation-wide suffrage to wom-en was guaranteed by this sentence in the 19th Amend-

Today eligible women voters Totaly engine women voters outnumber eligible men voters by 3 million. Thus in a span of 87 years American women have advanced from political obscurity to the point where they hold the balance of power. And this swift ascent began with the birth of a baby in a shack in Wyoming.

she can and takes advantage of what she can't.

"In a tub she's practically immobilized.

"In a towel she can go and do as she pleases—almost, A tub hides the figure; a towel accentuates it. Believe me, the suds finish a sad second as far as I'm concerned."

FOR SOME TIME Miss Hyer has been campaigning for more

"It doesn't make much difference whether there is one person out there, or 40—if the one is in trouble," says Roy J, (Dutch) Miller who learned to swim in the Pacific Ocean off of Pacific Ave., and for 35 years has headed the lifeguards here.

Dutch's first safety sugges-

His fourth:
If you get caught in a current, go along with it. Don't fight it.

His fifth:

If you get into trouble, yell or wave an arm.

BECAUSE OF THE protection of the breakwater, Long Beach's only breakers are from Pine Ave., to Alamitos Ave., and from 58th Pl. to 70th Pl. on the Peninsula, Dutch points out. Persons accustomed to smooth water are likely to get panicky if they hit a little rough water.

Dutch thinks all persons should swim reasonably near a lifeguard station.

CAUGHT IN THE CUR-RENT, a swimmer should go along with the current--it is too strong for him to fight anyway-and then make his way back, believes the lifeguard captain.

'If a person in trouble will float or tread water and yell or raise an arm we'll sure get to him if we can, It's funny, but kids horsing around can yell 'Help!' all day in fun and we don't pay any attention. But the minute anyone yells with terror in his voice it's dif-

sunny note of color in combination with counter tops of plain turquoise plastic. The floor is sand - and - turquoiseflecked vinyl. A second basswood screen has been installed over the kitchen sink at the window that overlooks an inclosed, sheltered spot which the Langslets are furnishing to function as a handy and hospitable out-door patio-kitchen.

Off the living area downstairs is a hallway heading to the room that offers its services as a play room for the Langslet youngsters. Also off the hallway is the guest bath.

Upstairs (a complete new addition) are three bedrooms, a spacious laundry - and - sewing room, and a master bath.

THE MASTER bedroom faces the front, thereby taking in a gull's-eye view of the picturesque canal. Deep-piled, lush carpeting is blush pink to match the walls. In a dressing area, recessed and installed with wardrobes and built-ins, cabinets are painted a delicate turquoise. A turquoise heirloom spread is accented with tiny pillows in pink, turquoise and white. Ice-pink boucle curtains dress the corner windows. A glass door, similarly draped, opens to a roofed open deck a charming spot to take the Sunday paper and a cup of coffee on a sunny morning.

The cheery laundry room, featuring the latest in electrical appliances, is carried out in coral, yellow and turquoise.

Finally, 3-year-old Julie Ann's room is ice cream-pink and white. Six-year-old brother Craig has an "all-boy" room carried out in sandalwood, turquoise and white.

Imaginatively bannistered, dramatic staircase leads to a second story that was added to original house.

Playground of the Kings

YOU CAN HAVE a "royal" vacation-Polynesian style, that is-in Hawaii where there are mementos of the Hawaiian monarchy on every hand.

There in the capital city on There in the capital city on the island of Oahu, you can visit Iolani (Bird of Heaven) Palace, once the home of the Hawiian monarch and today the only royal palace on U.S. soil, restored throne room where King Kalakana, 1891) and his sister, Queen Li-liuokalani, (1891-83), once ruled is open to visitors except when the Territorial Legislature is in

Up Nuuanu Valley along the main avenue to the Windsvard side of the island are the royal mausoleum, the former residence of Queen Emma, and at dence of Queen Emma, and at the sheer precipice called the Pall, the cliffs over which the army of King Kamehameha the Great, (1795-1819), pushed the warriors of Oahu to conquer the island. The lookout is busine today for its opnoramic known today for its panoramic view of the Windward coast.

ON THE "BIG ISLAND" of Hawaii an hour's flying time from Honolulu, the tropical Kona coast once was the playground of Hawaiian kings. Here, Kamehameha I gained prowess as a warrior, and here at Kaelakekua Bay is the spot where Captain James Cook met water captain James Cook met his end in a skirmish with the Hawaiians. There are ancient heiaus (Hawaiian temples) where kings once worshiped, the City of Refuge, huge lavawalled enclosure that was a place of sanctuary to the ancient Hawaiians, and the re-mains of an old royal road.

Across Hawaii island in the city of Hilo is the Naha stone, a giant block of lava, which young Kamehameha once lifted to prove his right to rule. On Maui, the "valley isle," which lies between Oahu and Hawaii, are other numerous reminders of the Hawaiian kingdom, which was in effect from 1795 until 1893. The pictur-esque little village of Lahaina once was capital of the kingdom and former rulers are buried in the village cemetery.

HALF-HOUR BY AIR to the north of Honolulu is Kauai, also coupled with royal history. One of the two major resort hotels on the island is the site of the former residence of Queen Deborah Kapule. In this Wailua river region the first Tahitians to come to Hawaii are believed to have landed. Any child of royal blood on the island had to be born here to be recog-nized as a true high chief. Seven sacred temples were located along the river.

All of these sites on all islands are easily accessible to visitors touring the major is-lands of the Hawaiian chain. Maui and Kauai are a half-hour flight from Honolulu by frequent inter-island air service. Hawaii is one hour away.

A ROYAL TOUR of Hawaii can be combined with beach sports, Polynesian and Oriental sports, roughestan and oriental entertainment and shopping tours, the big feasts called luaus and the fishing festivals called hukilaus for a full itinerary. One thing to remember: for all its royal heritage, Hawaii today is a modern American community, with all the con-veniences of home. The American flag is flown proudly over this U.S. Territory that hopes soon to become a slate.

GUIDE TO OUTBOARD CRUISING — This 62-page book, authored by Fessenden S. Blanchard, well-known boating writer and a 50-year veteran of cruising, is an authoritative, step by-step guide covering all phases of the sport from "why" to "how"! The author has many worthwhile hints, tricks-of-the-trade and suggestions about safety and seamanship drawn from his half-century wealth of experience with craft of all kinds.

OUTBOARD BOATING SKILLS-Authored by Everett B. Morris, associate editor of Motor Boating magazine and one of the nation's best known boatmen, the 64-page booklet covers every informative stage of the sport from "how to se-lect motors and hoats" to points of navigation, seamanship and rules of the road. The booklet's eight chapters laced with photographs, drawings and tables to bring to the reader the maximum of information in a simple, readily understandable form,

Mr. and Mrs. Woods, who had been rock hounds for a dozen years, became fossil fans five years ago when they began picking up ammonites (pre-historic shellfish related to the present day chambered nau-tilus) in the Lake Lehamon region in Nevada. There are 100 different known species of ammonites, and the Woods have 12.

They have picked up many of their fossils; others were given to them; they traded for

A Black Hills friend long had used a petrified turtle for a doorstop, and knowing Woods' interest, gave it to him.

A LENGTHY LIST would be needed to catalog all of the col-lector's items assembled by Mr .and Mrs. Wood. One of the curious bits is a gizzard stone from a dinosaur, 25-ton fellow of the Age of Reptiles, 60 to 200 million years ago.

Another is a faw tooth of an elephant of the Pleistocene Age; still another is the fossilrized knuckle bone of an elephant, a stone of cutting quality. The tooth is from Ohio; the knuckle bone from Nipomo in Northern California.

First form of life on the earth is believed to have been the trilohite, spineless underwater creature which appeared 500 million or so years ago. In form, trilobites were something like jellyfish or sponge.

Through the swamps in-habited by the trilobites rose crinoids, flower-like animals on long stems.

Mr. and Mrs. Woods have fossilized trilobites and they have crinoids which are em-bedded in Mississippian limebedded in Mississippini Impersione. The limestone indicates that the crinoids are 250 million years old. Trilobites and crinoids came from LeGrand,

Make Halloween a Happy Time

Called, "Bewitching Snacks," the food items pictured here are certain to delight guests at any Halloween celebration. (See recipes on this page.)

By Mildred K. Flanary

ALLOWEEN pranks and problems are looming in homes. Witches, black cats, hooting owls and fear-some masks hide gentle pixie faces. The doorbell rings, and we hear the familiar chirp, "Trick or treat!"

Youngsters will be more than delighted to have their parents enter wholeheartedly into the spirit of Halloween. So plan a bewitching snack for older children and adults and have plenty of California oranges to give ghostly beggars who come knocking at the door and have plenty of oranges to use as treats for your party guests. For a rollicking-good Halloween take these bewitching

The snack can be most tempting. Please your guests by adding juicy cartwheel slices of oranges to the tasty combination of cold meats, cheese and potato chips. The tiny mirthful orange goblins made from clear-skinned California oranges, provide gay decorations. Adding to the spirit of the occasion and providing tasty bites to accompany ar

They Put Plato to Modern Use

Great Books of the Western World discussions attract persons from various walks of life from throughout the Southland. Here is one group in session.

By Aubrey B. Haines

THROUGHOUT the Southland nowadays- from Indio to Avalon and from San Diego Van Nuys-persons of many professions gather two nights a month and for two hours at a time discuss the Great Books of the Western World. What is more, they love doing it. The aim of Great Books since its inception in 1945 has been to convert a college course in liberal arts into a nationwide community project. No a cademic requirements are neces sary for participation. There are no lectures, professional lecturers, or fees. There are no fixed opinions which Great Books seeks to inculcate, nor (Continued on Page 26.)

A GLANCE AT courses for the first six years reveals such diversified authors as Plato, Machiavelli, Montaigne, Shake-speare, Euclid, Thoreau, Hume, Mill, Einstein, Descartes and Stendahl. People come from many walks of life to provide many walks of life to participate in reading and discussion. Housewives sit among businessmen, cabinetmakers, secretaries, engineers, draftsmen, lawyers dectars, taries, engineers, draftsmen, lawyers, doctors, teachers and ministers. Though there are many levels of understanding in any group, education is open to everyone who reads pains-takingly and discusses the book at hand with an open

Here is a typical group. From 10 to 40 persons are gathered at tables which allow everyone to see everybody, else. The to see everybody else. The room may be in a library, a school, a church, or a comroom may we are school, a church, or a community hall. The group is discussing a selection from "The Republic" of Plato. A leader asks, "Mr. Schmelling, what would you do if you had the ring of Gyges?"

"You mean the invisible ring

that Plato talks about?" Mr. Schmelling inquires,

A secretary, Grace Malderone, interrupts, "Not the invisible ring — the ring that makes you invisible. You could get away with anything."

"Would you rob a bank?" a co-leader inquires of Schmelling.

"Of course not!" the man replies. "It wouldn't be honest."

Julius Mossuto, a teacher, asks, "What if someone stole your money from you in the first place?"

NOW FOUR members of the group raise their hands. Wishing to speak all at once, they sometimes do. The aim of Great Books groups is to make its better better efficience and members better citizens and better persons. The power to think is exclusively human. Authors separated by centuries and continents deal with the same basic questions, for the nature of man and the universe does not change.

During World War I the late John Erskine drew up for in-fantrymen the first list of great fantrymen the first list of great books while in charge of an American study center at Dijon, France. Returning to his post at Columbia University in New York, he persuaded the faculty to establish a two-year course in which selected upper-classmen would read and discuss these books. As a student at Columbia, Mortimer J. Adler took the course, later becoming an instructor in it. Then he joined the faculty of the Uni-versity of Chicago, where the Great Books Foundation originated with the help of Robert Maynard Hutchins, then university chancellor.

TODAY ALL OVER America people gather to discuss these books. Not only do the most intelligent people appreciate and profit by the courses. Nineteen hundred years ago Quintillian wrote: "You will find that most ucoule are cutck to that most people are quick to reason and ready to learn.
Reason comes as naturally to man as flying to birds. Those who are dull and unteachable are as abnormal as prodigious births and monstrosities and are but few in number." So to-day men use the Great Books as powerful lenses by which they evaluate past, present, and Two Great Books courses are conducted in Long Beach under the auspices of the Public Library. A first-year group meets on alternate Wednesdays, 8 to 10 p.m., in Los Altos branch library, 5614 Britton Dr., with Paul Nicas and John G. Dayton, co-leaders. "HER BEDSIDE COMPAN-"HER BEDSIDE COMPAN-ION" edited by Margery Dar-rell Lobsenz, and "HIS BED-SIDE COMPANION" edited by Norman M. Lobsenz (Prentice-Hall, $3.95 each): Many of the world's finest writers contribute to these highly amusing an-thologies devoted mainly to foibles and nonsense of the opposite sex in fashion, essays, poetry and cartoons—gathered not only from the usual sources but also from radio broadcasts, magazine articles and even his-torical reports. "His Bedside Companion" is as masculine as a man could wish for, its contents ranging from an exciting blow-by-blow account of the Battle of Midway to poker ctiguette and some sound advice on woomanship. Its female counterpart, "Her Bedside Com-panion" is, by the same token, extremely feminine, containing such subjects as a dissertation on beds and bedrooms, advice on choosing a husband, and attaining fashion smartness. Here is prime bait for readersin-bed who like to be caught laughing.

"AMERICA, WITH LOVE," by Kathleen Winsor (Putnam's, 54): This is a slice of America of depression days, seen through the eyes of 12-year-old Cassy Spangler, who wants to look like Jean Harlow, and thinks that Russ, a neighbor, is more handsome than Ronald Coleman—especially when Russ lets her ride his bicycle. It is a book, too, of straining budgets, of backyard jokes, of people whose lives are considerably different than they seem. Persons who grew up in the depression will find much of the material familiar.

"THE INCIDENT" by Marc Rivette, (World, $4.50): Men and the sea, danger in a lurking submarine, hunger, thirst, raw sun and salt lashings make this one of the dramatic novels of the new season. It also is a promising first novel of a writer better known for his drama articles and book reviews in the San Francisco Chronicle. Drawing on his memory of service with the Merchant Marine in World War II and in the Korean Conflict, Rivette writes about a freighter torpedoed without warning, and how the 16 survivors work out their individual destinies.

"READING FOR PLEAS-URE," chosen, with introduction and comment, by Bennett Cerf (Harper, $4.95): Here for you to gorge on, served up by Cerf with a welcome generosity, are 750 big pages, 60 writers and 60 selections: Short stories, nonfiction, bits from novels, pieces from magazines and newspapers, even adveritsing copy. The names range from Wolfe to Mansfield, Carson, Faulkner, Wharton, Beerbohm, Buchwald, Bork and some not so familiar. Every reader might not go for some of the selections with the promised pleasure, but none should miss Cerf's biographical notes, where Cerf is Cerf.

"DR. SCHINDLER'S WOM-AN'S GUIDE TO BETTER LIVING 52 WEEKS A YEAR" by John A. Schindler, M.D. (Prentice-Hall, $4.95): While every woman undoubtedly would gain much by reading this book, it is aimed directly to women with problems. general practitioner and personal counsellor, helps the woman become the person she wants to be by discussing her strengths and weaknesses, how to deal with others in the business world, how to create harmony within the family and how to lead a happy life with her husband. To do all these things, Dr. Schindler points out, a woman must keep her confidence and peace of mind, and he has some excellent formulas to achieve these capacities.

"COURSE IN MAKING MO-SAICS" by Joseph L. Young (Reinhold, $3.50): This introduction to an ancient art and craft—now bounding back to popularity—will find many takers. Everything needed for the nuvice is here—tools and materials needed, various methods, suggestions on cutting, and executing and installing a mural.

"THE FABULOUS TOM MIX" by Olive Stokes Mix with Eric Heath (Prentice-Hall, $3.95): An autobiography of sorts, by the widow, of one of the great Western stars of yesteryear. The older set will read it with nostalgia since it will bring back many memories of the Tom Mix-Will Rogers era.

"GETTING ALONG IN THE TEEN-AGE WORLD" by Virginia Veeder Westervelt (Putnam, $2.50): Do's and don'ts of making friends, keeping friends, entertaining, being entertained and dating are told in this down-to-earth volume which if carefully read will save the feelings of many teenagers and their distraught families. There also are solid tips on how to be happy and successful, how to know when you are in love and how to build a good marriage.

"OPO OF THE OMAHA," by Pearl Haley Patrick (The Caxton Printers, Ltd., $3.50): Written for boys and girls 9 to 13 years old, this tells about a peaceful Indian tribe who lived on the banks of the Missouri liver for generations before the white men came, The reader gets acquainted with a young Indian as he plays games with the other Omaha children, and rejoices with him in the buffalo chase, in feasts, ceremonies and solemn rites when he returns.

Boat Around a Corner

By Bob Ruskauff

HOSE Englishmen have been trying to build a boat that would go fast around a corner for years," commented a corner to your Ted Jones.

"They build wonderful engines and you've got' to admire the courage of that fellow Don Tabell and others. Why Campbell and others. Why they don't come up with a good competition boat is beyond me." The comments bear attention inasmuch as tall, personable Ted Jones of Scattle is, if not the greatest, certainly among the greatest designers of last racing hulls today.

THOSE FROM HIS boards include the clite of the unlimited hydroplanes. Some are already in the limbo because of accidents on the rooster-tail roads—such as the fabulous Slo Mo Shun IV (which alone started the west on its way to domi-nation of the motorboat racing world), Miss Thriftway and Shanty I.

Others are on top of the pack now--Hawaii Kai III, Thrift-way Too and Miss Wahoo, among them.

Like many other Americans whose business or hobby is going fast over water, T. Jones feels there'd be tremendous impelus if England would come up with a piston-engine hydroplane that would lick the pants off, say, one of the Jones-de-signed creations.

CANADA TRIED a year or so ago but couldn't quite cut the mustard with Miss Supertest, which challenged for the Harmsworth trophy at Detroit. The coveled International tro-phy (posted in 1903 by Lord pany (posted in 1905 by Lord Affred Harmsworth, British publisher) was won in 1956 by the late Shanty I, under the hand of Col. Russell Schlech, who is now stationed at March

There are, of course, two viewpoints to consider and England's one great water speed champion today leans to the belief that the piston engines have about had it.

Ornamentals the Bugs Don't Like

By Bob Gilmore

SPLENDID GROWING conditions in the Long Beach area are as favorable to bugs as to the plants they feed on. Millions of dollars are spent every ear in an effort to decrease the bug population; yet, garden pests multiply with a vengeance. One way to solve this problem is to plant ornamentals that are not too tasty to the bugs.

One of the best foundation plants is abelia grandiflora. This subject may be set in either full sun or part shade. The leaves are shiny but quite small and possessed of a delightful bronzy-green color. Clusters of fragrant, pinkish-white florets ap-pear during a large part of the year. The abelia is hardy down to zero and not at all appealing to bugs.
THE ESCALLONIA is another plendid choice in this area for gardens subject to pest infestation. This plant is a natural for gardens situated along the coastal region. It seems to delight in the sea air. Two varieties are available; one with red flowers and the other with pink

Japanese boxwood is another favorite for gardeners in this region. It has attained its greatest fame when used as a hedge. The plant may be kept trimmed to a height of about from two to three feet as it reacts favorably to fairly regular pruning. Japanese boxwood is quite hardy and very unpalatable to the bug population in your garden. It is hardy down to about 10 degrees.

ANOTHER RELATIVELY

Palms and fatshedra are relatively free from pest infestation, but are still decorative in the landscape.

domestica, better known as the heavenly bamboo. This is actually a dual purpose plant for it may be used in the garden as a hedge or in pots for specimen purposes. It is most attractive during the winter season when the entire plant turns a beautiful - coppery-red.

Bougainvilleas have been pop ular in this area for many years. While new varieties are intro-duced every now and then it can be said that the old standby, Crimson Lake, is still one of the best. The flowering sections are red. An equally attractive variety, however, is Barbara variety, however, is Barbara Karst, the color being somewhat deeper than Crimson Lake. Also available are bougainvilleas that show purple as well as bronzetoned shades.

RHUS OVATA, a California native, takes heat and drought in stride. It is not bothered by the cold. It is often called the "sugar bush," a misleading name as the sugary coating tastes sour due to the sour berries. This plant wants lots of sun but thrives in almost any

Other ornamentals that are not too palatable to most bugs include geranium, plumbago, polygala, veronica, vinca, scabi-osa, iceplant, iris, jasmine, bachelor button, carissa grandiflora, alyssum, gazania, calendula, cedars, coreopsis, linum, gaillardia and arborvitaes.

Dwarf Citrus Has Its Points

VISITORS from the East are impressed when they can go out in their hosts' back yard in sunny Southern California and pluck a ripe orange or lemon. Even the host enjoys grewing some citrus of his own.

Nowadays, what with smaller homes and lots, it isn't always nomes and lots, it isn't aways practical to grow large size citrus trees. Yet space limita-tion shouldn't deter you from growing citrus in your own back yard! Now, you can grow dwarf citrus, whether it is orange, lemon, lime, tangerine, kumquat, limequat, grapefruit, and other varieties of citrus. These trees with true dwarf understock roots grow from around 4 to 8 feet tall, and spread. Of course, those grown in containers are more easily kept to a smaller size.

WHEN YOU GO to your local nurseryman to buy a dwarf citrus, be sure to specify you want citrus that is budded to a true dwarf citrus use. It proa frue dwarf citrus use. It produces a small tree bearing crops of fruit up to 90 per cent of the commonly grown large tree from citrus. Also, this understock imparts a superior quality of fruit in several types of citrus that are budded to it. Some growers have found it has a few degrees more resistance to cold. They've become exceedingly popular as container-grown specimen plants because they seem to be resistant to ex-cess water. That doesn't mean the soit may be suggy wet all

The Magnolia St. Mary has the same appearance and growth habits of the large shade tree but its expected mature growth is less than 15 feet. It resembles the Magnolia exoniensis, a dwarf form of M. grandi-flora which has been well known in Southern California for years.

A major attraction of the new dwarf, as with the large tree, is its fragrant, cup-shaped, white flowers which bloom intermittently throughout the year. The tree itself has many attractions for home gardeners, according to the California As-sociation of Nurserymen. Its shape is erect, compact and very symmetrical and its hand-

NOW'S A GOOD TIME to give that lawn of yours some attention before the cold weather sets in Thickly turfed lawn may need only a fertilizing to give it a greening up. First, mow lawn close. Edge the walks and trim around the sprinkler and trim around the sprinkler heads. Fertilize about 40 pounds of balanced complete plant food to each 1,000-square-foot area. If lawn is somewhat new, apply not more than 40 pounds per 1000 square feet. SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA residents and tourists go pienicking and sightseeing—and load their cars with apples, cherries, peaches, plums and either

It's the realization of a dream of Guy Bogart of Beaumont, than which no town has a more enthusiastic booster.

The extent of this "buy-atthe-orchards" has been accomplished by making the area one of the most important Southern California tourist objectives.

Under Bogart's leadership has grown the Oak Glen Tourist Assn. with its Loop Route of Yucaipa, Calinesa, Oak Glen, Cherry Valley, Bogart Bowl and Beaumont for yearround travel.

THIS IS A 27-MILE route but travelers to or from Palm Springs and other desert cities need travel only an extra seven miles to reach the agricultural valleys and mile-high apple country, since 20 miles would be traveled on the regular speedway route.

The spectacular tourist trade at the orchards began a little more than 30 years ago with Beaumont cherries.

Eight years ago Bogart turned his attention to the flavorful Oak Glen apples. Within a few seasons, tourists began going to the mountain area in 70,000 cars from September to January, stopping at the roadside salesrooms which are open every day.

MANY ORCHARDS maintain large free picnic grounds, under towering live oaks and pines. Yucaipa and Beaumont have fine city parks.

Year-around picnic facilities are available in the Cherry Valley-Beaumont area in the famous Bogart Bowl.

"We would like to do a bicycle tour through Europe. Do we buy the bikes here! Will they be expensive in Europe?"

A BOUT HALF the price over there that you would pay here. Also there's a booming second-hand market. When you are ready to leave you can sell them.

An added advantage: You can put them on European buses and trains to get across hilly country or long hops.

Seems like everybody in Europe rides bicycles. But you have to have sturdy legs to pedal around. (A half hour did for me.)

You might look into the putput bicycles that have the little gasoline motor attachment. And scooters looked to me like the best and easiest cheap transport. They fix them up with back seats, sidecars and all sorts of attachments for the extra rider.

"... some place warm to spend the winter? Maybe Mudrid, Spain?"

or MADRID THEN. Madrid can be as cold as a pawn broker's eye. It will be warmer down around Malaga on the Mediterranean coast. That's nice country — olive groves and big, gray ruined watch towers.

Or you might try Portugal. Lisbon high temperatures are only in the midfifties. But from there you can head south and pick up one of the governmentrun pousadas. Get the locations from the Tourist Bureau in Lisbon.

This is nice untouched country. A lot of it has walled towns and castles just like the Moors left it over a thousand years ago. Portuguese food is good and their wines are better than Spain.

than Spain.

The pousadas are inexpensive and are very comfortable. There's not much English-speaking help. But you can get by with a phrase book. The language is not hard to pick up.

"How do you tell about drinking water while traveling? In Mexico, for example?"

ASK SOME local American. In Mexico, for instance, I question water in the smaller towns. You can get the bottled water without carbonation. Tehuacan is a good one. Ask for it "sin gas."

Big city water is usually all right. At least my friends drink it out of the tap. I always ask. Don't be shy about asking. A lot of piped water around the world is suspect.

"Could you suggest a place to buy ski boots while we are in Switzerland?"

YOU'LL RUN INTO THEM in every ski resort, But if you happen to be going through Schaffhausen - between Zurich and the Black Forest country of Germany---that's a local industry.

Your mailed questions will be answered (no phone calls). Send stamped and addressed envelope to Stan Deloplane, Southland Magazine, Independent, Press-Telegram, Sixth and Pine, Long Beach 12. Calif.

Shoot the action in your home movies and you've really got something worth while.

CAMERA ANGLES

Continuity Is the Key

By Bob Knight

CONTINUITY is the real difference between home movies and snapshots... between what you can do with the latter, and should do with the former. With a snapshot camera you arrest... freeze... isolated glimpses of subjects or of events. Such as of a youngster, halted at play. Or of a favorite vista, singled out of an entire mountain range. Or of the straining finish of a closely contested footrace, In short—highlights. But with a movie camera you can tell the full story, in which a highlight becomes a climax.

short—highlights. But with a movie camera you can tell the full story, in which a highlight becomes a climax.

To make our point, let's say you want a snapshot of dad, out in the driveway, washing the new car—and heaven knows dad gets into all too few family pictures. If yours is a very simple snapshot camera, which won't stop action, you ask dad to — "Hold it!" — and you squeeze off a shot of him, feaming sponge in hand, beaming at your lens. If your snapshot camera can halt action, you just click it whenever fancy strikes.

WITH A MOVIE camera, however, you don't want to get a glimpse—you want to tell a story. You don't want to story action—you want to record it. So, in a brief series of long shots and short—"long" and "short" in terms of both camera distance and scene duration—you really show dad washing the car.

The whole trick is to shoot it as you'd say it — and the chances are you'd say it just about like this: "Bill's really proud of that new car of ours. Scrubs it, stem to stern, every clear weekend. First he drives it out of the garage and parks it in a patch of shade under an elm tree about halfway down the drive. Then he scrunches down with hose and bucket and brews up a brimming pail of sudsy water. Then the sponge, and a pawfull of foam. Car top . . . windshield . . hood . . . front right fender . . . then front left—scrubbing like crazy wherever some suicidal bug kamakazied the paint job . . . hosing off every last bubble before he pats it dry with his chamols. And then the chrome! He fusses over it like our fifteen-year-old primping for a prom. I always try to have a tall, cool glass ready for him when he finally backs away to admire his handwork, with canary feathers all but showing at either end of a prideful srin."

LINE THAT. Just the way you'd describe it — with sentences, phrases, or merely words, translated into movie shots. Some made from well back . . . some, almost within inches. Some 10 seconds long, some 6 or 7. Some but 3 or 4 seconds. A picture story in color, and in action. A moving picture, as only a movie camera can tell it. Any movie camera.

It works for any subject, big or little. All, if you let them, write their own continuity. All you have to do is film the story as it unfolds.

In movies, continuity is everything! For, although your movie camera takes but one shot at a time, your movie projector, inevitably, shows them consecutively—a fact that implies that they will all be part of a story.

-when electricity dries

fresh-air sweet indoors?

Only Electric Dryers can do it. In an electric dryer, radiant coils warm the air inside. There's no flame, none of the by-products of combustion. It's cleaner and purer than any other way of drying. 32% fluffier than back-yard drying—and electric drying doesn't fade colors.

Electric dryers not only cost less to buy, but less to maintain. Before you tote another load out into the hot sun, see the new electric dryers at your appliance dealer.

A Week for Cats

By Eleanor Avery Price

WALT WHITMAN wrote in "Song of Myself":

"I think I could turn and live with animals,

They are so placed and self-contain'd,

I stand and look at them long and long."

Whitman was including all animals, but the words seem to apply especially well to eats, whose "Week" starts on Nov. 1, stressing for the 13th consecutive year appreciation, under-standing, and better care of

One of the greatest gifts the cat gives his owner is his calm approach to life. If we look at him "long and long," we can feel a peaceful sense of relaxation. Some men have even been known to take along the family cat when going fishing because it's the cat's nature to stretch out nearby and purr contented-ly and because of the fun a cat can have over such elemental things as leaves, bugs in tree hollows, or worms used for fishing.

CATS, OF COURSE, serve in other ways than helping their owners find an pasis of peace amid pressing troubles. For instance, the American Fe-line Society in a survey indicated that where cats had been nearly exterminated in sections of New York, the prevalence of diseases rose because of rats. In fact, if it were not for the common street cat, the rat and mouse population of cities might have become equal to that of Hamelin town before that of Hamelin town belove the advent of the legendary Pied Piper. Except for the cat, you might not be alive today. Think this over the next time At least usher him out with a mild "shoo" and not with the broom.

If you will visit a guide dog school such as those at San Rafael and Beaumont, you will Rafael and Beaumont, you win learn that cals and kittens of all types and colors are serving at these training schools to ac-custom the dogs to fit into their life work as eyes for their new owners. Dog are permit-ted to see the cats but re-strained from chasing them. Perhaps you or a loved one may someday need this priceless gift that cats are helping make pos-

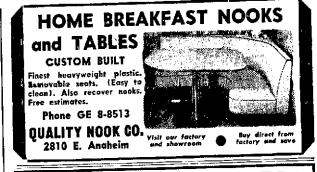

PURRING PLAYFULLY kittens also provide a great measure of comfort to blind persons attending the schools in preparation for "graduation"

The life of a child, too, can be greatly curiched by the com-panionship a cat can offer, de-pending, of course, on the child being taught the fundamentals of cat care. Children should learn to handle cats gently, to brush them carefully, to feed and water them, and to respect their need for privacy while eating.

Cats also serve humanity in laboratories for physiologic and chemotheropeutic tests. Medi-cal investigators are so interested in the cat that this animal is also the subject for parapsychologists in such places as Duke University under Rockefeller Foundation grants,

Caricature by Milt Reppert MR., MRS. GOODWIN

The Atmosphere Is Colonial

NO WONDER Leonard and Belle Goodwin wear such bright smiles as they go about their multiple duties at their large, colonial-style restaurant at 8567 Artesia Blvd., Bellflower.

Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin have every right to be cheerful because they've made the pleasant discovery that their hundreds and hundreds of friends and customers keep coming back week after week, year after year for more of that wonderful Goodwin's cooking and home-like atmosphere.

The customers always take a personal interest in what Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin are doing. For example, in recent weeks scads of patrons have asked: "When are you going to start serving luncheons again?" So naturally the Goodwins replied: "Your wish is our command!" As a result luncheons are now served Wednesdays through Fridays from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

SUPERB DINNERS are featured Sundays from noon to 8 p.m. and from 5 to 8:30 p.m. the rest of the week. (The resthe rest of the week. (The restaurant is closed Mondays and Tuesdays.) These are large, complete dinners served in deep comfortable booths in a huge dining room which is light, airy and immaculate. Among the entrees are these for $2: chicken fried steak, breaded veal cutlet, Dutch-oven not roast and fried Louisiana jumbo shrimp. Fried chicken is $2.25 and the Goodwin's famed New York steak and eastern prime rib au jus are $2.85 each. All dinners include soup and salad, with choice of dressing, baked potatoes with cheese sauce and green onions, a second vegeta-ble, homemade rolls, choice of beverage, and choice of numerous fancy desserts including sensational icebox pie.

Goodwin's has a large ban-quet room for groups up to 200 and accommodates smaller parties in the Green Room. Winifred Trickey plays trickily on the organ on weekends.

Capsules as checked below: [] Woman's Formula I ENCLOSE 254 PER PACKAGE to pay for packing and postage. .. Zone City 2006 Stude

This offer is limited to those who have never before taken advantage of this generous trial. Only one trial supply per person.

IN CANADA: 394 Symington Ave., Toronto 9, Ont.

(Canadian Formula adjusted to local conditions.)  PUT yourself in your husband's place then ask yourself: would YOU marry a woman who had too soon lost the pep, vitality and vigor she had? Would YOU want to live with a tired, and maybe even nervous person who felt and acted far older than her actual age? Be honest and tell yourself what YOU would think of a woman who simply let her youthful energy needlessly slip away—a person about whom people were beginning to talk behind her back.

Well, if you have been feeling extratived lately . . . if you find life a chore instead of a joy, perhaps science has the answer for your problem. It may well be, that just like thousands of people all over the country, your condition is merely the result of a common and easily corrected nutritional deficiency in your dietl

Yes, you may actually be "well-fed but poorly neurished" simply because your daily diet lacks certain essential vitamins, minerals and lipotropic factors. You owe it to yourself and your husband to find out whether a safe, proven food supplement such as Vitasafe High-Potency Capsules can restore the pep and energy you used to enjoy. Take advantage of the marvelous free offer described below and see for yourself whether Vitasafe high-potency capsules can help you regain at least some of your youthful pep and energy

CAP-SULES so you can discover for yourself how much healthier, happier and peppier you may feel after a few days trial! Just one of these capsules each day supplies your body with over twice the minimum adult daily requirements of Vitamins A, C and D... five times the minimum adult daily requirement of Vitamins B-1 and the full concentration recommended by the National Research Council for the other four important vitamins! Each capsule also contains the amazing Vitamin B-12 – one of the most remarkably potent nutrients known to science — a vitamin that actually helps strengthen your blood and nourish your body organs. Vitasafe Capsules also contain Clutanic Acid, a natural substance derived from wheat gluten and thought by many doctors to help nourish the brain cells for more power of concentration and increased mental alextness. And now, to top off this exclusive formula each capsule also brings you an important dosage of Citrus Bioflavonoid – the anti-cold factor that has been so widely ac-claimed. This formula is so complete it is available nowhere else at any price!

SPECIAL FORMULA FOR MEN Many men also suffer from lack of pep, energy and vitality due to nutritional deficiency. If there is such a man in your house, you will do him a favor by bringing this announcement to his attention. Just have him check the "Man's Formula" in the coupon.

POTENCY AND PURITY GUARANTEED

There is no mystery to vitamin potency. As you probably know, the U. S. Government strictly controls each vitamin manufacturer and requires the exact quantity of each vitamin and mineral to be clearly stated on the label. ### A penny, a nickel, a dime

by GLENN FORD

t always carry three very special coins in my pocket: a penny, a nickel and a dime. And I'll never spend them because they're constant reminders of the most important lesson I ever learned.

Like the average family in the depression days of the early 1930s, mine didn't have much money, especially while I was growing up in Santa Monica, Calif. Still, I don't recall wanting for the many things a young boy seems to need — model ships, kites, tops, candy and the like.

Whenever there was something I really wanted, I could rely on my grandmother. She seemed to be a never-ending source of money. Even when I didn't ask, she was there to give me a nickel, a dime, even a quarter to buy some imagined necessity of life. I was grateful, but after a hasty thank you, I'd be off thinking of my own satisfaction.

I was 11 when my grandmother died. Except for three coins in her purse, she left nothing. The coins were a penny, a nickel and a dime. For the first time in my life, I realized something: I had been too engrossed in my own wants, my own growing up, to think of someone else, someone I deeply and sincerely loved. My grandmother never bought anything for herself. She had scrimped and saved pennics so that I might have some fun. I had taken her devotion for granted.

Since then those three coins have made me see that so many of us treat those we love with less respect and consideration than we sometimes accord absolute strangers. We rationalize that a brother "will understand," that a wife "should realize," that a mother "knows." The result is that we're often indifferent to the feelings of those who are closest to us. We blame this on such things as lack of time, business pressure — or mere forgetfulness.

I have no such excuse. I still carry with me three reminders of the importance of respect, consideration and kindness: the penny, the nickel and the dime my grandmother left behind.

On Parade

Not long ago the entire free world took a sharp, quick breath when Russia announced it had successfully fired a missle with a global range thousands of miles. What did this mean to America? Have we fallen behind in today's most deadly international race?

Today, on pp. 8-10, Washington correspondent Jack Anderson gives you the answers. Anderson and his bureau partner Fred Blumenthal long have kept PARADE readers up to the minute on missile development; this year alone they have produced four other exclusive articles from top military sources. You'll find Anderson's latest report informative, as always—and reassuring.

Four holidays are just around the corner — Halloween, Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Years. Holidays mean food — so today Food Editor Beth Merriman comes up with six brand-new holiday desserts (pp. 24-26). "The ingredients aren't novel," Beth tells us, "but the way you put them together is."

Beth's food page, by the way, is one of our most popular features. Many readers clip them for future use. Should they lose a recipe, Beth hears from them eventually. Recently two letters came in the same mail. One from Mrs. Rex Thordarson of Melrose Park, Ill., asked for the recipe for Irish Soda Raisin Bread "you published about two years ago." The other, from Sandy McEachern of Fontana, Calif., sought a recipe for Casserole Bread that appeared before the 1956 Christmas holidays.

They're on the way, ladies. And frankly, we're delighted at this reassurance that there still are plenty of home bakers around.

Where we stand on

The great guided-missile race

by JACK ANDERSON Parade Washington correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C. Late last August, a terse announcement crackled over Radio Moscow: "An over-continental ballistic missile has been tested. The results show it is possible to deliver a nuclear warhead anywhere in the world."

Does this mean Russia has won the long-distance missile race and now can bombard America with atomic missiles? Or was the boast only hot an, an ingredient frequently found in Soviet propaganda?

To get the answers, execut talked to the men able to evaluate the Soviet announcement: technologists who watch East-West scientific standings the way sports fans tollow the tootball results, intelligence experts who track Russia's missiles with every modern means of surveillance. They helped paramit prepare the exclusive map on the opposite page, showing the missiles' potential global background. See below.

Rest easy on one score: Radio Moscow did not catch the experts by surprise. They had been expecting the announcement for three months is just as they anticipated the later word of the Soviet space satellite. Work on satellite and missile was closely correlated; in fact, an ICBM probably was used to hurl the artificial moon into space.

But how did Russia, which lagged years behind us in developing the atomic bomb, catch up and perhaps pass us in the missile race? The answer lies in the fact that in 15 years Bussia's industrial output has jumped 200 per cent while her population has increased only 5 per cent — and this is nowhere more evident than in the missile field.

After World War II, the Soviet Union took over most of the German rocket industry, which had been producing V-1 buzz bombs and V-2 rocket bombs. Some 160 German rocket experts went to work for the Soviet missile program. They improved the V-2, boosted its range from 250 to 400 miles and called it the T-1 ballistic missile.

A Steady Step-up

Later they built more power into the engine, added another stage and produced the two-stage T-2 (range: 1,200 to 1,800 miles). This first intermediate missile was tested more than two years ago, now is part of the Soviet arsenal. At recent missile maneuvers in the Arctic, the Reds fired towering T-2s from ships, submarines and land launchers. Our intermediate missiles, the Jupiter and Thor, are superior but still not operational.

From the T-2, the Russians took the big stride to the T-3 intercontinental missile. This is a souped-up, three-stage missile with a powerful engine but weak electronic brain. It is not as advanced as our long-range Atlas and Titan eventually will be. But Russia has fired the T-3 while we are still building the Titan and testing the Atlas' first stage.

The T-3 was launched from north of Vladivostok on the Pacific, traveled about 4,500 miles over the top of Siberia into the Arctic. (This may explain why the Russians used the term "over-continental" instead of "intercontinental.") The goal was distance, at the sacrifice of accuracy. Perhaps we could stretch our ballistic missile range to 4,500 miles, too, by piccing several rockets together in multiple stages. But in any case neither side will have operational ICBMs for three to five years.

Intelligence experts admit Soviet factories are producing more missiles than ours, while, for economy reasons, we have slowed down our production schedule. Our scientists may have a slight technological edge over the Russians. We have developed a better guidance system; we also can pack the H-bomb into a smaller warhead. But the Soviets have designed a more rugged power plant.

Where will this mad race for missile supremacy lead? Will mankind destroy himself by his own genius? Dr. Wernher von Braun, German rocket pioneer now working for Uncle Sam, thinks not.

"Any ballistic missile capable of carrying a nuclear bomb over an intercontinental range can be modified to carry a few instruments to the moon," he says, "Space flight will free man from his remaining chains, the chains of gravity which still tie him to this planet. It will open to him the gates of heaven:"

Global map shows today's missile ranges-and tomorrow's

Would Russia or America be more vulnerable to missile warfare? This authentic map, drawn in the Pentagon especially for PARADE, shows the strategic position of both sides. Here is a breakdown of comparative missile strength:

Short-Range Missiles. Both arsenals are bristling with small missiles. Numerically, Russia has more; strategically, ours are better located.

We have built a picket fence of small missiles around the Communist world. Fitted with atomic warheads from secret overseas stockpiles, these can bring the Soviet satellites under devastating fire but only nick the edges of the Russian Bear. Within range are the Black Sea sub base at Sevastopol, Baku oil fields in southern Ukraine, missile and air bases on the Siberian coast above Vladivostok. But the industrial heart of Russia can't be touched.

Medium-Range Missiles. Russia now has enough intermediate missiles to destroy our forward air bases and bombard our allies from Japan on one side to Britain on the other. Our bases in Saudi Arabia and Spain still are out of range. On this continent, only Alaska can be reached.

Our intermediate missiles won't be ready for combat duty for another year. Then they will be able to reach 98 per cent of Russia's military targets from our overseas bases. Only a jagged hole in the middle of the Soviet expanse would be safe.

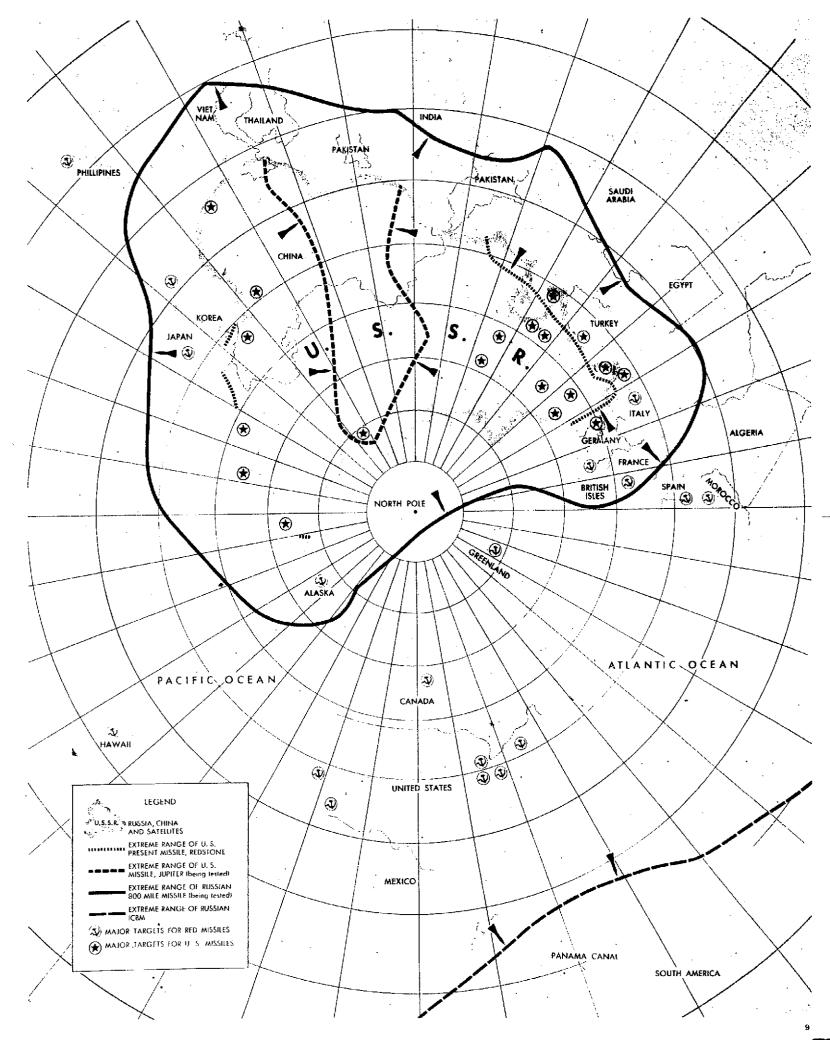

Long-Range Missiles. It will be three to five years before the experimental models blossom into an intercontinental missile that can east its shadow half way around the world. The Soviet ICBMs will be able to hit any target north of the Panama Canal. This means the United States, untouched through two world wars, no longer will be a privileged sanctuary. Of course, American ICBMs should be ready to return the fire. Since they will be able to hit any spot on the globe, the map has no line marking their range.

Meanwhile, lesser missiles can be fired close-range by subs, ships and planes. Red subs can slip right up to the American coast and launch missiles from underwater. And our medium-range bombers can now fire missiles at Red targets 600 miles-away.

The map has two symbols for "major targets," theirs and ours. Both represent areas only, in two categories: 1) industrial areas and military bases—such as New York, Pittsburgh, Hawaii on our side; Moscow, western Siberia, Vladivostok on Russia's, and 2) missile launching sites—such as ours in Morocco, Saudi Arabia and Japan; theirs west of Moscow, near northern Finland and in north-central Siberia.

This article was on the press when news of Russia's latest satellite and missile developments broke. Despite the ensuing confusion, U.S. long-range military thinking is geared closely to the facts presented here. This article remains basic reading and is recommended to all Americans—THE EDUIORS.

How to refuel on the move

To help keep our missiles flying, the Army has developed something.new: a mobile refueling plant. Missiles, like men, require oxygen. Since there is too little in the stratosphere, they must pack their own. Compressed, in liquid form, it is fed into their fuel in flight. The Army's plant not only does the complicated compressing job (converting air to liquid, then distilling out the LOX, or pure oxygen) but can follow a missile crew to any launching site. Today, at Ft. Myer, Va., the plant will be unveiled. On this page PARADE gives you an exclusive first look at it.

FOUR SEMI-TRAILERS house the Army's new mobile refueling plant. Once campressed, the LOX is rushed to missiles in trucks. A special engineer company will run the plant.

MISSILE IN POSITION gets LOX from tank truck. The LOX is fantastically cold (297° below zero), and in this photo its level in the missile is marked by the rising of frost on the outside. Breathed into the missile fuel in flight, LOX produces the power needed to conquer space.

What do you really know

Answer true or false

Tomorrow morning, Monday, there will be 11,000 more babies in the United States than there are as you read this on Sunday. Three months from today there will be 1,000,000 more. A year from now, America's population will be swelled by more than 4,000,000 members of the

All this has been going on for some years - a tremendous haby hoom which, on present indications, still may have a good way to run. Last year there were 4,168,-000 births in the country, the greatest number ever. And it looks as though 1957 will top even that total.

This brings up a timely question. How much do you really know about those cute but somewhat buffiing little beings called babies? And just how much do you know about their handling once they begin to develop?

Take this quiz to get an idea of how much "small-fry information" you really possess. Based on studies by leading authorities in the field of infant growth and development, it contains facts every grownup should know.

Count 5 points for each correct answer. If you score 70 to 90, you're an expert; 40 is passing; below that, your knowledge is in its infancy.

- 1 All babies are blind at birth.
- 2 The average girl baby weighs more at birth than the average boy baby.
- 3 First babies generally are larger and heavier than later ones born to the same family.
- 4 A newborn baby cannot taste or smell anything.
- 5 You can tell that your baby will be left-handed or right-handed as soon as he's able to grasp objects.
- 6 Infants only a few days old are not sensitive to heat
- 7 If a young child has a temper tantrum, stop what you are doing and reason with him. Generally he'll see the logic of your position.
- 8 It's a bad idea to give a 2- or 3-year-old child anything to cat between meals. Let him be satisfied with his three meals a day.
- 9 Never allow a very young baby to sleep on his stomach. He may suffocate in that position.

- 10 A baby's teeth begin forming in the gums when he's a few months old, but don't start appearing till the sixth month or so.
- 11 Among the first sounds made by a baby are "ma-ma" and "da-da." This is the first attempt to say "mother" and "daddy."
- 12 A good present to get a 11/2-year-old is a toy merry-go-round that winds up and whirls. He loves to watch it in action.

Circle the correct answer

- 13 Stuttering generally starts at about the age of 2 or 3. It develops (more often-less often-neither more nor less often) in boys than girls.
- 14 A baby gets its healthiest start in life by being born in (summer - winter - autumn - spring).
- 15 A child's head grows as large as it will ever become by the age of (3 - - 6 - 10 - 15).
- 16 A newborn baby begins to hear (right away -- at 2 weeks - 4 weeks - 8 weeks).

- (A) 3 to 4 mos. (1) He smiles his first real smile.
- - (B) 6 to 8 mos. (2) He reaches for and grasps an object dangled in front of
  - (C) 1 to 2 mos. (3) He sits up by himself.
- (D) 4 to 6 mos. (4) He laughs out loud.
- 18 Children change psychologically as well as physically as they grow. Can you identify the child with the type of behavior normal for his age?
- (A) Age 3
- (1) He's as contrary as they come.
- (2) He likes to make friends. (B)
- (3) He's an angel --- reliable, stable. (C)
- 21/2 (4) He's violently emotional, brash, aggressive, sure of himself.
- (5) He's calm, easy to live with, but (E) withdraws and pouts often.

- ANSWERS -

- All statements in the true-false section are FALSE! Here are explanations of these and other questions.
- 1 A newborn haby cannot see color. His vision is dim, but he is not blind. From the day of birth, he perceives light. At 4 months his vision is developed fully.
- 2 Boys are usually larger and heavier than girl babies at birth and throughout babyhood. But girls beat out boys in certain types of development.
- 3 First babies tend to be smaller than later ones.
- 4 A new baby can taste and smell. Watch him as he detects the odor of milk. And he experiences strong physical sensations --- for example, being fondled.
- 5 Generally, infants are more than a year old before they show specific inclinations toward left- or right-handed-
- 6 A new baby is very sensitive to heat and cold. If you move him from a place where the temperature is constant to where it varies, he'll need several days to adjust to the change.
- 7 Ignore the tantrum. If the youngster learns his outbursts net him little, he'll soon give them up.
- 8 Since a child may not eat a great deal at any one meal, it's perfectly all right to give him extra food at regular intervals. Suggestions: fruit, fruit juice, milk, bread and
- 9 If he seems comfortable, let him sleep that way. Even a young baby can turn his head to get air when he's on a firm, flat surface without a pillow.
- 10 Though teeth do start to crupt through the gums at about six months, they actually begin to form six months before birth. Almost the entire set is formed and hardened in a baby's gums by the time he's born.
- 11 Parents like to think this is so, but it isn't, Babies utter these sounds because they are among the first that come naturally.
- 12 Don't get a baby a toy he can't run without help. An 18-month-old is better off with blocks, soft dolls, colorful pegboards and push-pull toys.
- 13 More often. Boys "outstutter" girls four to one.

I reduced for keeps

"That is why I recommend the Knox Eat-and-Reduce Plan to all my overweight friends." writes Miss Rose Lee Grace. New York Nutritionist

One of the keys to this modern reducing plan is the pleasant habit of drinking Knox Unflavored Gelatine in your favorite beverage. At your grocer's in either the 4-envelope family size or the 32-envelope economy size.

"TODAY I am even 7 pounds lighter than when I finished the Knox Plan."

READ WHAT MISS GRACE WROTE TO US

"I am a restaurant meal planner. I know nutrition and I know that reducing and then gaining weight is a vicious cycle. I've been through it in the past. So when I read the Knox Eat-and-Reduce Plan book, with its Choice-of-Foods Charts, I realized it could really help me get down to normal weight and stay that way. I could see that it was safe, natural and practical. And it involved nothing but good food. I love good eating.
"I found it was easy and actually pleasant to follow, at home and at restaurants. I ate almost everything I like, including desserts, with three real meals a day and sometimes between-meal snacks. My job is not an easy one, and as my weight went down I felt no loss of energy. I felt better, physically and mentally.

"Well, a few months later I was 61 pounds lighter.
"And now comes the amazing part of it! Without conscious effort I had acquired the easy habit of balanced eating, without giving up any of my favorite foods or the pleasures of eating. Today, instead of being fat again, I am actually 7 pounds lighter than when I finished eatingby-plan."

SLIM DOWN FOR LIFE

Miss Grace's happy experience with the Knox Eat-and-Reduce Plan is typical of hundreds of thousands. FLOYD PATTERSON'S fist mold (above) comes from a session with Dr. Walter Jacobs (r.). At 22, Patterson is the youngest fighter in Jacob's collection. Oldest: Jack McAuliffe, retired in 1887, who had a fist mold made when past 80.

He collects fighters' fists

Having his fist "taken" in the photo above is Floyd Patterson, heavyweight champion of the world. The taker is Dr. Walter Jacobs, a New York dentist who has spent a good part of the last 20 years filling in what he believes is a large cavity in the history of boxing.

"All kinds of ring records are collected," he points out, "but nowhere can we find out the most important thing about many boxers of the past: What did their fists look like?" To date, Dr. Jacobs has collected 90odd molds of the fists of famous fighters. Method: They dip their fists in a reddish gum used by dentists to take impressions inside the mouth. His molds are on display at the Museum of the City of New York and the Museum of Natural History in New York. One, a mold of Joe Louis' fist, is at the Hyde Park, N.Y., memorial library to Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Dr. Jacobs, a longtime boxing buff, says his compensation is the thrill of meeting such fistic greats as Mickey Walker, Henry Armstrong, Jack Johnson, Lou Ambers and the idol of his boyhood, Benny Leonard

He has also learned something. "Some people think," he says, "that the bigger a boxer's fists, the harder he punches. But take a look at the size of Primo Carnera's fist compared to Tony Canzoneri's. Tony hit like a mule, Primo like a powder-puff. The bigger the fist, sometimes, the harder they fall."

PRIMO CARNERA AND TONY CANZONERI: The 15"-diameter fist of Carnera (I.) dwarfs Canzoneri's. But Tony hit harder, says Dr. Jacobs, since punching power is based on candition and timing, not size of fist.

GENE TUNNEY AND JACK DEMPSEY: In contrast to the jabbing Tunney's (I.), Dempsey's fist shows the effects—especially in the flottened knuckles—of the sledgehammer blaws he delivered over the years.

ONSCREEN "bottle station" finds Jon Lindbergh pursing his lips. Note camera in background. In real life, Jon made lieutenant (j.g.) as a Navy "fragman."

A Lindbergh turns actor

Ever since the kidnap-death of their first son in 1932, the family of the famous flier Brig. Gen. Charles A. Lindbergh has shunned the spotlight. This shyness has applied to all five Lindbergh children: Jon. Land, Scott,

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.

Reeve and Anne.

Above, however, you see a Lindbergh in the spotlight: the oldest son of the "Lone Eagle," Jon, 25, making his motion-picture debut in Underwater Warrior. The movic is based on the exploits of Comdr. Francis Fane of the Navy underwater demolition teams—the "frogmen." Jon, who portrays a young officer in a battle sequence, served under Fane and now is his partner in a firm which specializes in scientific undersea research.

Because of this association, young Lindbergh took the part — a job that lasted two days. After that, he visited his parents in Darien, Conn., then settled down in a new home here with his wife and two small daughters.

San Diego remembers his father: the then-unknown flier came here in 1927 to inspect a monoplane later named The Spirit of St. Louis. Old-timers call Jon his "spittin' image—tall, lean, good-looking and just as quiet."

He also is just as shy. Underwater Warrior, Jon vows, is his first and last movic. "I am definitely," he says, "not an actor." But for a few minutes on film he has given America a good look at the new generation of Lindberghs.

INTENT Bobby debates a move. He has made several trips to tourneys by himself, but his mother keeps in touch with him by telephone. The long-distance tolls for a Nebraska trip: $50.

chess whiz, but-

experts, his mother wants better report cards

by PAUL ABRAMSON

BROOKLYN, N.Y.. At 14, a local boy named Bobby Fischer is regarded as one of the 20 top chess players in the world. He is the U.S. Open Champion, has been invited to compete at tournaments in Russia and England. "Players with Fischer's ability," says Maurice Kasper, president of the Manhattan Chess Club, "come along only once in a century."

Yet Bobby Fischer, a boy of exceptional intellect, is the despair of his high-school teachers. Last year, as a freshman, he fell behind in all his subjects, and almost didn't pass. This year the outlook isn't much better. Bobby is a chess whiz, but-

Just why mystifies everyone who knows him. "When he was 7," says his sister Joan, 19, "Bobby could discuss mathematical concepts like infinity, or do all kinds of trick problems. But ask him to multiply two and two and he'd probably get it wrong."

This contradiction in Bobby's mental makeup has not made life any easier for his mother, Regina Fischer. Divorced from her husband, she has had to work hard—at present as a registered nurse—to support two children. And between times she's had to scurry from school to school with Bobby.

"When he was in fourth grade," she says, "I'd already taken him out of six schools, mostly because he didn't like them. Once I entered him in a class for especially bright children. He walked out after the first day."

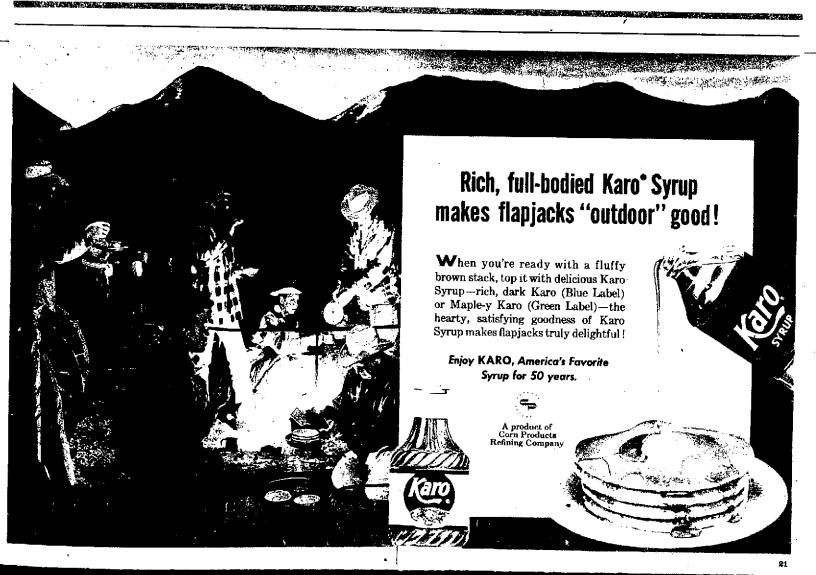

Aware that Bobby is a child prodigy whose talent must be helped to grow, Mrs. Fischer has continued to try to get special training for him. "I've visited university guidance centers and agencies for gifted children," she says. "Mostly they

"One thing I would suggest," says a teacher at the public school he attends, "is that Bobby spend more time studying and less time at chess."

Mrs. Fischer nods helplessly. She feels that to ask that of a boy who won the 1957 Open title, topping all but two of the best players in America, would be rather like asking Mickey Mantle to play less baseball and more mah jongg. Bobby, she says, plays chess even while eating, keeps a board always near his bed to practice on.

Blond and on the thin side, Bobby away from chess is much like any teenager. He's wild about blueberry pie, the Dodgers, baseball, basketball and plaid shirts. He listens to rock 'n' roll records for hours on end. So far, he has shied away from girls and dancing.

$1 and a Rainy Afternoon

He's cocky about his chess. Once he played Samuel Reshevsky, the balding little accountant who's been the king of U.S. chess since 1936. The experienced Reshevsky, 46, polished off Bobby, then 13, with little trouble. But afterwards he told a bystander: "The boy is brilliant; he'll go far." Bobby, meanwhile, was pointing out to anyone who would listen how Reshevsky had missed moves that would have ended the game sooner.

What amazes old chess hands is that Bobby has been playing the complex game less than eight years. His sister Joan had bought a $1 set to while away a rainy afternoon; she and her 6-year-old brother played a few games, but he was only mildly interested. Two years later he walked into the Brooklyn Public Library — he's a voracious reader — and saw Max Pavey, an international chess master, standing inside a rectangle and playing as many as 20 matches at once.

The curious Bobby sat down at a board and made a move. A few minutes later Pavey had forgotten about the other players and was concentrating hard on beating Bobby. He did, but it took him 15 minutes — a long time for an international master against an 8-year-old who'd played only a few games in his life.

A teacher of chess, Carmen Nigro, witnessed the game. Impressed, he offered to teach Bobby. Within a few years Bobby was beating Nigro regularly. By 1956, now a member of the Manhattan Chess Club, he had tied for fourth in the U.S. Open and won the National Junior Championship — the youngest titleholder in history.

This glittering record carned him a bid to the Lessing J. Rosenwald tournament, the top test of U.S. chess to which only six to 12 of the top players are invited. He was beaten several times — but, playing against the only man in the tournament to defeat Reshevsky, Bobby won.

"I never saw any game played better," says referee Hans Kmoch. "It was the game of the century."

Bobby finished eighth in the tournament, but won the coveted prize for brilliancy. Among those finishing behind him was Max Pavey, his library opponent of seven years earlier.

Last summer Bobby scored his greatest triumph, winning the U.S. Open Chess championship at Cleveland. He defeated the best American players with the exception of Reshevsky and Larry Evans, neither of whom competed. In the next few months, some experts believe, Bobby may prove himself the equal of them both.

Money for His Mother

Right now, though, he must start doing better in his school work and try to help out his hard-working mother. To make money, he has taken on as many as 30 challengers simultaneously at $1 a challenger. But such games, he says, "don't produce good chess. They're just hard on your feet."

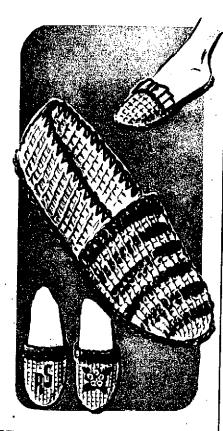

Recently his chess playing has started to produce bigger dividends. He won $750 for winning the Open, $125 in another tournament. This, he says, will help him toward his goal: the chess championship of the world.

How long will it take him? Says the cocksure Bobby about a crown that some men have spent a lifetime chasing: "I guess maybe 10 years."

The six beautiful desserts on this and the following pages - enough for all the feasting to come in the next two months - feature the well-loved, traditional flavors in brand-new guise. Most of them are lighter, less rich than their old-fashioned cousins, but none the less delicious. Happy eating!

- 3/4 cup canned strained cranberry sauce
- 3/4 cup orange juice
- 1/4 cup water
- 2 tablespoons light corn
- 1 teaspoon grated orange peel
- 1/3 cup water
- 1/3 cup instant nonfat dry milk powder

Set refrigerator control at coldest point. Combine cranberry sauce, orange juice, 1/4 cup water, corn sirup and orange peel; beat until smooth. Pour into 1-quart refrigerator tray. Freeze until crystals form around edges of tray. Pour remaining 1/3 cup water into deep 1-quart bowl; sprinkle dry milk powder over surface. Beat with rotary beater or electric mixer until stiff, about eight to 10 minutes. Turn cranberry mixture into large bowl; beat until smooth. Fold whipped milk into cranberry mixture. Spoon into refrigerator tray; freeze until firm. Makes eight servings, at approximately 90 calories per serving. If desired, top each serving with additional whipped milk and a little cranberry sauce.

DOING THE LINDY atop New York's International House, Hedwig Verboon (I.) and Teresita Ganzales demonstrate one thing they've learned from American teenagers. Watching: Pola Kaval (I.), Naoka Yamada.

How other teenagers see you

Tomorrow's world will be even "smaller" than today's. That's why what others think of us — our customs and attitudes is important to you, the adults of tomorrow.

Tve been talking with Girl Scouts and other teens from Holland, Japan, Greece, Mexico and South Africa, as well as Americans who have been abroad. All of them have been taking part in student-exchange programs. I find that foreign students of both sexes like American teenagers and teen-age customs — with a few reservations.

Perhaps the most favorable, and typical, comment is this from a girl: "The thing I like most about the United States is that you can talk to a boy without wairing for him to speak first."

On the other hand, one girl said she thought foreign boys treat girls with more respect, "as if you were something fragile." Kyra Blumberg, South Africa, thinks it's "a shock to have a boy call you at six and ask for a date that very evening."

Why Do You Date?

The casualness of boy-girl relations in America has its disturbing side for some who are brought up to link dating closely with love and marriage. Hedwig Verboun, Holland, said: "In the United States, it seems you don't go to a party with a boy because you like him; you go with him because you want to go to parties."

But even Hedwig had to admire the social ease of American teenagers. She was astounded at how American girls speak up in public, even disputing parents and teachers. "We're more reserved," she said. "We don't argue with grownups. And we never open our eyes to a boy until we are about 17." By that she meant that proper Dutch girls are too shy to flirt,

Though Dutch schools are co-educational, girls go stag, even to high-school parties. In most other countries, boys and girls go to separate schools. As a result, Teresita Gonzales, Mexico, said she never had a when-to-kiss or whom-to-kiss problem, as so many United States girls do. "I scarcely see a boy alone, even by day. And at night we are always chaperoned."

Naoka Yamada, Japan, was not only amazed at the freedoms permitted American girls but also critical. American parents, she said, push their children into growing up. "Mothers worry if their daughters don't date at 13 or 14. It doesn't seem to me that American children have a chance to be children."

Pola Kaval, Greece, criticized American conformity: "Everybody does what everybody else does. Something in the air compels you to. For example, here girls all wear lipstick. In Greece we do not. But here I must wear lipstick - -- or, at least, I feel that I must."

Anita McLaughlin, Peru, remarked on how little work U.S. girls do in their own homes. "I pictured them as doing dishes and scrubbing all day long... the sort of endless menial drudgery Indian servants are hired to do in Peru. It's true, teenagers here do help around the house, but they certainly aren't the slaves 1 thought they were."

All the foreign girls were impressed by American labor-saving housekeeping machines, as visible symbols of our prosperity.

And, like Naoka, all of them also had observed that American teenagers are not treated as children — but as junior adults.

Perhaps, as a result, U.S. boys and girls take responsibility much sooner, the group agreed. "I admire the way so many have paying jobs," was Kyra's comment. "Nobody at home works his way through school, but most everybody here — even girls — helps some."

Americans, on the other hand, were amazed to discover how short the growingup stage is in other countries.

Teresita who, at 18, is still treated as a child and has never been kissed, may well be married within a year, never having had a real adolescence. Some Americans still will be in school at age 22 or 24, dependent on their families, and, in effect, still adolescent.

A Key to Understanding

In this connection, one educator I know points out that ours is one of the very few countries which can afford a long, dependent adolescence. Our technical civilization not only makes this possible but requires it, he says. More education becomes necessary, year by year, just to make a living.

Technical education alone, of course, is not enough preparation for living in a steadily shrinking world. All the teenagers I talked with seemed to feel that getting to know other people as persons is essential.

They urged more travel, more Girl Scout and other student-exchange projects such as those envisioned by President Eisenhower's People to-People Program. These, they felt, would help maintain friendly ties between their own and other nations in the future, when they—and yon—are the world's adults.

Syrian newsstand deep in the Red

DAMASCUS, SYRIA. Do you doubt the penetration of Red Russian influence into the Near East? If so, look at this recent photo of a newsstand in the capital of a nominally independent Arab state.

Syria, a former French colony, for years has had three languages (Arabic, French, English). As a result, most of the publications above bear French or English titles. But note: Almost every one is a Communist propaganda sheet.

Start at the top with La Chine, which "sells" Red China in French. Drop past the Russian-language magazine with its cherry blossoms (a "peace" symbol) to Soviet Women with its dove (another) on a hammer-and-sickle. Go right to a second magazine in Russian, this one featuring happy workers. Pecring over them is the Red "god," Nicolai Lenin. Skip left to Images (French); its cover glorifies Egypt's pro-Soviet dictator Gamal Abdel Nasser.

Below Nasser, something called News shows the happy inmates of a Russian children's home. Moscow News and New Times, both offered in two languages, speak for themselves. Finally, more copies of La Chine almost elbow aside two local newspapers of "neutral" content.

Query: If Syrians want pro-Western reading, where do they go?

Watch Your Baby's Hands Grow Smarter!

◆ At 4 months, he plays with his hands like toys. Baby's new game of "fingering his fingers" shows he's using his head to make his eyes and hands work together as a team.

◆ By 10 months, he picks up tiny things with forefinger and thumb. Learns pat-a-cake, waves byebye. Not a good ball player; he can't depend on his hand to let go!

• Early in his second year he feeds himself. His mind tells his hand to find his mouth with a spoon. And before long, your smeary but happy baby begins to master his favorite skill!

Babies get tired of the same menu day after day. To make your baby's meals exciting, serve Heinz tasty Exclusives—such as Macaroni-Tomatoes-Beef-and-Bacon. Chicken Noodle Dinner. Split Peas-with-Vegetables-and-Bacon. In both Strained and Junior versions, you'll find many delicious varieties made by Heinz Baby Foods—but nobody else! Heinz Baby Food kitchens are located right in the nation's garden spots wherever the finest fruits and vegetables grow. Our haby-food specialists carefully select the pick of each crop and pack it at flavor peak—to insure Heinz Baby Foods better color, perfect texture and finer flavor.

• Mother's helper? We know each baby is different but let's not forget fathers are different, too! This was pointed out at the 1957 Annual Conference of the Child Study Association of America. Some dads pitch in and help with baby and household chores, others just don't. There is no such thing as an Ideal Dad, but there are all kinds of different ways that a man can be a "good father." (Almost any husband—haven't you noticed?—will join in the family jobs and fun, and do it more often, the less he's urged to do so.)

• Glass is clearly mother's favorite container for baby food; more than 75% of all baby foods are packed in glass these days. It's so easy to see what you buy. Besides, glass is so pure it just can't damage the taste and purity of what's packed inside. Even such delicate flavors as Heinz Strained Egg Yolks stay fresh and delicious. Every jar contains over three nourishing creamy-textured yolks your baby will love.

• Ahead-of-the-times: Heinz High-Protein Cereal – another Heinz Baby Food First! It's taire as rich in protein as regular baby cereals, Heinz Baby Food experts devoted nine years of research to perfecting High-Protein Cereal. Made from such nutrients as wheat germ, soy flour, oat flour and milk—this delicious-tasting dish gives your baby a firm foundation for good healthy growth. HANDSHAKE from President Eisenhower (L.) greets PARADE publisher Arthur H. Motley at Washington small-business conference. Watching (l. to r.) are: Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks, deputy conference chairmon Dr. Charles N. Kimball, chairman Eric A. Walker (with his back to camera) and Wendell Barnes, U. S. Small Business Administrator.

Helping hand for 'little guys'

Small businessmen, in the spirit of do-it-yourself, meet to see how they can share in the wonders (and profits) of modern research

America's small businessmen long have looked with a mixture of envy and frustration at the research facilities of large business.

They have admired the shiny laboratories for the development of new products. They have reflected wistfully on the intensive market research which their bigger brothers in the business world take for granted. Most of all, they have seen the added profits that seem to stem almost inevitably from newly developed products and better aimed sales efforts.

But to the man who runs the neighborhood shoe store, or the fellow who is playing all the instruments in the business band as he keeps his family's small metal working plant alive, the wonders of modern research seem almost as remote as they are glamorous. "After all," the small businessman is likely to say to himself, "I've got to do my ordering and write my ads and get the bills out. Where will I get the time - or money - for anything else?"

Aid from Ike

Much of his plea is soundly based. But from Washington recently came news that made the "little men" in business prick up their cars even while they waited on customers and punched the eash register. The word: news of a helping hand from an extraordinary source.

The hand was that of President Eisenhower, himself no stranger to the perils and problems of small business in his younger days. It took the form of a special conference called by the President to examine the research problems of small

Its goal was to show small businessmen everywhere --- from the "mom 'n' pop" soda shop on the corner to the bigger "little man" with 100 to 500 employees -- how they, too, could share in the magic rewards of research as applied to business

At Ike's invitation, nearly 1,000 representatives of small business, trade associations, universities and government met for three days at their own expense. Together they looked over the field of research to see where small business fits in.

Their encouraging answer: If small lusiness doesn't have time or money to do its research on the scale of big business, it still can share immensely in the vast storehouses of research information which are available free or at small cost.

Such storehouses include government agencies, trade associations, the trade and business press, the data which large business often is glad to share with smaller operators and, finally, the experience of fellow small businessmen.

Called the "President's Conference on Technical and Distribution Research for the Benefit of Small Business," the conference was headed by President Eric A. Walker of Pennsylvania State University. Deputy chairmen (for distribution, i.e., sales) were PARADE president and publisher Arthur H. "Red" Motley, and (for technical research) Dr. Charles N. Kimball, president of the Midwest Research --Institute of Kansas City, Mo.

Along with trading ideas of their own, small businessmen heard publisher Motley report on a unique "profile" of small businessmen drawn from data assembled before the Conference by the crack New York research firm of Douglas Williams Associates. Some conclusions:

They're All Individuals

- · There is no "typical small businessman," Many of them actually are mayericks; all are highly individualistic.
- · Making money is important to them, but often not as important as their freedom to do as they like, their pride in product or record of success.
- · The "little guys" often prefer to stay that way and not get involved in the corporate "team" life of the big companies.

But, though individualists, the small businessmen in Washington showed themselves alert to using the tools of business success, and deeply imbued with a "do-ityourself" philosophy of adapting the otner fellow's experience to their own needs. After swapping ideas, listening to reports on research sources and hearing "case histories" of small businessmen who have made research pay off (opposite p.), conferees saw the possibility of getting into the research picture in a major way.

Best evidence that the Conference succeeded was this: a unanimous decision to do it all over again, next time in cities across the land. Continued on page 31

No more cheesecake?

Some top actresses are banning it. Here are the reasons

JOAN COLLINS says she wants to give up photos like this. At right are two other stars, with photos they too have dropped.

by LLOYD SHEARER

It hasn't made headlines, but there's a growing revolt in this town. Its object: the kind of publicity photos known as cheesecake. At least four top-name actresses, who once were only too anxious to pose for leg art, now say they've had enough of it. Kim Novak, Sophia Loren, Joan Collins, Anita Ekberg — they all maintain they want the lensmen to concentrate on their faces or their covered figures, or they just won't pose.

Why? Joan Collins offers this reason: "Hollywood buys glamor. To prove she's glamorous, a girl has to show a pretty face and plenty of figure. Once she does, however, and lands a contract, why continue the cheesecake? It works against you. The public becomes convinced that all your talent lies in your measurements. I want acceptance as an actress, not a pin-up."

Adds Sophia Loren, whose early poses in the nude are now collectors' items in her native Italy: "In the beginning I was so poor, so ambitious, I pose for pictures in nothing. Now no longer poor, no longer

And Anita Ekberg, possibly the most photographed pin-up girl of the decade, says: "If a girl is unknown in Hollywood, her only chance of getting a break is through leg art or body art. Once she gets the break, then she can prove whether or not she can act. The worst thing that can happen to an actress is to be known as 'The Body' or 'The Bosom' or 'Miss Chest Expansion.' It's like being a freak. That's why I've cut out such pusing."

It's Happened Before

These statements suggest that actresses who pose for leg art are hardly as abandoned as their photographs might indicate. Instead, most of them are consciously or subconsciously ashamed of their immodesty and use it only as a means to an end. Once that is achieved, they tend to cool on cheesecake in a hurry.

Consider Joan Crawford, Jane Wyman, Rita Hayworth, Lana Turner — to name four long-established stars. To get started in Hollywood, they posed in every conceivable type of costume. They wanted the publicity and knew that would help get it. But once they attained some stature in the movie industry, they felt that leg art was no longer needed — or desirable.

Fifteen years ago, for example, Jane Wyman's studio used to fluod city desks with revealing shots of her. Then she starred in The Lost Weekend, won an Oscar for Johnny Belinda and applause for The Yearling, The Glass Menagerie and Stage Fright. Suddenly leg art on Jane Wyman vanished.

Today the same thing is happening to Kim Novak. In an effort to convince the public that Kim has arrived as a dramatic actress, her studio has issued the fiat: "No more cheesecake."

Baoul Walsh, a director since 1915, says: "It's been my experience that well-endowed actresses love to pose for cheese-cake when they're single. You know, show the boys their God-given talents, revel in their own young beauty. But once they get married, they usually become more conservative. 'My husband won't like this,' they tell the studio still man."

Walsh points out that Sophia Loren only a couple of weeks ago married her discoverer, Carlo Ponti. Anita Ekberg recently was wed to actor Anthony Steele. Joan Collins is going steady with Arthur Loew, Jr. and Kim Novak has various serious admirers.

Even Jayne Mansfield...

There also are the proved examples of Marilyn Monroe and Elizabeth Taylor. Before Marilyn married Joe DiMaggio, she posed in the altogether for calendar art and later added the covering necessary to comply with the movie censors. Once she got married, however, that sort of posing came to a quick halt --- and has stayed halted. As for Elizabeth Taylor, her favorite pose since her marriage to producer Mike Todd is a closeup with tiara.

ELIZABETH TAYLOR

Even Jayne Mansfield, who's built an entire career on cheesecake, has decided to cover up a little. Explains one publicity man: "Jayne posed in a Bikini at the press showing of Underwater. The resultant notoriety got her a part on Broadway in Will Success Spoil Rock Hunter? A photogenic bosom became her stock in trade. Now she's exploited it to death. Jayne knows it, and we know it; so for a while we're laying low."

In Hollywood's long and colorful history there have been relatively few actresses who never had to resort to leg art for publicity. Mary Pickford, Katharine Hepburn, Bette Davis and Dorothy Mc-Guire are examples. Miss Pickford, of course, is out of the pre-cheesecake era. The other three started on the stage and were signed by Hollywood because they could act.

One actress does claim that leg art saved her career. She is Deborah Kerr. Before Deborah played a memorable love scene with Burt Lancaster in From Here to Eternity, a seene in which she was clad in a tight bathing suit, she had been cast in a series of "nothing" pictures. "The public was convinced," she says, "that I was about as sexy as a grape. They had never seen my legs or anything. Once Eternity was released I attained a sex-appeal quotient, and it's stayed with me ever since. I am profoundly grateful."

Deborah Kerr, however, is the exception. Most of her female colleagues feel differently -- for now, anyway.

Syrians Say Shots Traded With Israelis

Turks, Too, Violate Frontier, Damascus Spokesman Reports

DAMASCUS (AP)-The Syrians Saturday night reported brief exchanges of gunfire between troops on both the Turkish and the Israeli frontiers. No casualties were listed in either incident.

A Syrian army spokesman said an Israeli patrol infiltrating Syrian territory near Jlei-bina, in the south, fired on border posts. He added: "Our troops returned the fire and the Israeli patrol withdrew."

The government information

office announced a series of al-leged incidents along the Turkish-Syrian frontier within the past 36 hours.

IN ONE, a Turkish patrol from the Nusaibin post was said to have penetrated the northeast border Friday night and neared a Syrian military barracks. A Syrian guard or-derer the patrol to halt and the Turks fired a shot, the announcement said. Syrians returned the fire and the Turkish patrol withdrew.

The announcement also said a Turkish patrol coming from the direction of Mhaish post kidnaped a Syrian herdsman and seized his cattle while shooting bullets in the air. The yards deep into Syria.

ALSO LISTED was an incident in which 60 Turkish troops, apparently training about 400 yards inside their own border, were "shooting bullets which landed in Syria." The announcement mentioned alleged flights of four

-Scientific authority has relieved Sputnik and the Far Side rocket experiments of any responsibility, for this area's gossamer shower.

The explanation involves spiders.

Skeins of silvery filaments drifted out of the sky over a wide area of southeastern New Mexico Wednesday night and Thursday morning. Big globs of the stuff collected on TV antennas and telephone poles.

People here were puzzled.
Dr. William Koster, University of New Mexico biologist, was the first to offer the spider explanation. He offered it tentatively without examining the material.

Now Portales people have searched through books on spiders and are inclined to believe The phenomenon is not uncommon, says one threads have fallen in has been subject to fantastic interpretations. the true explanation is very simple

That is what Dr. Koster said too. Even so many years, in order to get away from their hungry mammas the little spiders secrete a silk-like substance which acts like a bal-

Ioon, and wafts the spider vast distances.

A Las Cruces newspaperman added the observation that this is fairly common in his native Louisiana, where it is known as "Grandmothers Veil." In France it is known as Fils de la Vierge, and in Germany as Mari-enfaden, or "Our Lady's Threads."

In Portales it had no name except unprint-able ones given it by broomcorn and cotton farmers who said it was a big nulsance.

Children here were inclined to still a more simple explanation. With Halloween only a week away it is time that someone attended to getting the cobwebs out of the sky.

Oklahoma Wins by

Oklahoma, the nation's top-ranked collegiate football team, came within one point of having its 44-game winning streak shattered Saturday but finally squeaked past Colorado, 14-13, on a comefrom-behind surge in the final quarter.

Other major powers such as Iowa, Notre Dame, Michigan State and Army also emerged on top after an-other hectic round of play but they, too, had to fight for their wins.

Iowa, No. 3, struggled through mud and snow to stay unbeaten with a 6-0 victory over Northwestern; Notre Dame finally decked Pittsburgh with a second-half rally, 13-7; Michigan State also had to come from behind to subdue Illinois, 19-14.

On the Pacific Coast, Stanford shocked UCLA 20-6, and in a real thriller at the Coliseum Washington State edged SC, 13-12, before a regional television audience.

Bare Announcment Fails to Indicate Marshal's Future

WASHINGTON (AP)-J. S. officials from Presi-Eisenhower down vere fascinated and mystified Saturday by Moscow Radio's bare announcement that Soviet Defense Minis-ter Georgi Zhukov had been relieved of his post.

They did not know whether o speculate that he was on his way up to the premiership or down to possible disgrace and oblivion under the regime of Soviet Communist Party Boss Nikita Khrushchev.

President Eisenhower, who ad a military acquaintanceship with Zhukov in Berlin 12 years ago, withheld comment. He was reached at a football game at Annapolis and the report of the radio broadcast caused an obvious flurry of nterest in his party.

rected at some system for use of present school facilities 12 months a year. By so doing the effect would be to add 25 per cent or more to the number of classrooms now available.

For many years California taxpayers have been voting hundreds of millions of dollars to help school districts which have already reached their bonding capacity. The amount voted in the past 12 years has already exceeded a half billion dollars. Now it seems probable another $200 million will be asked for on the ballot next year.

This writer has supported each state school bond issue in the past. But at the time of the last issue, we stated we doubted we would support another until there was evidence that these poorer districts had plans for greater use of present facilities. There is no end to such subsidies as long as these districts can get more school buildings paid for by the rest of the state.

One example of a realistic approach to the problem is that of the University of Pittsburgh. It has just announced a program to extend its school year from two to three semesters. It means the university would be providing full courses for 45 weeks a year instead of the present 35. It means almost a third more students can be handled with the same facilities.

It is pointed out the plan will allow teachers to increase their incomes by being paid for this additiontl 10 weeks. It means students can shorten their university years if they take advantage of the extended time. The saving in building costs is assurance of better pay for teachers.

There is sharp opposition by parents in the secondary and elementary schools. The parents object to changing vacations and having children in school for longer periods. But the economics of the situation are causing many school districts to study plans to take care of the ever increasing school population-while faced with the cold fact that the people are not voting bonds for new buildings.

The past three years have produced more news Items on the subject than were produced in the whole of the last quarter century. It is a logical development to change a habit. Our present nine-month school system was originally adopted to allow children to help with the crops. That reason no longer exists—but this opposition to changing established habits is strong. The real test will come in many districts which must have new facilities—or use those they already have to a greater extent.-L.A.C.

90 Planes to Fly in Mock Raid

Inited States theoretically comes under a triple Pearl Harbor attack-and then some starting next Wednesday.

Ninety high flying bombers, opening a week of simulated nuclear bombing raids, in theory will blast three target ities—Atlanta, St. Louis and Kansas City, Mo.—off the map. Four of the "enemy" craft will be jet bombers of Britain's Royal Air Force (RAF).

THEIR PARTICIPATION will mean, says the U.S. Air Force, that the United States will be under air attack (simulated) by foreign jet bombers for the first time in its history,

Pearl Harbor was an assault lasting only a few hours executed by propeller-driver aircraft using conventional

By contrast the mock raids starting Wednesday night, based on the devastating power of hydrogen bombs, will involve more than 700,000 miles of mission flying, and 270 bomb drops on each of the three cities.

Heart Cases Slow Oxidizers of Fats

slow or lazy use of fats they eat, a new study reported Saturday.

The peak concentration of fats comes later in persons who have coronary artery disease than in normal ones, and the fats stay in the blood longer, Dr. William Likoff and associates of the Albert Einstein

Medical Center, Philadelphia, told the American Heart Assn. THIS IS new evidence that angerous narrowing of arteries rom fatty deposits inside them, s due to a faulty way of handling fats, they said.

This fault might someday be corrected, or precautions taken through diet or other means to avoid the artery disease and heart attacks. As yet, heart specialists do not agree there is a clear-cut tie between the fats we eat and the artery-clogging disease.

Dr. Likoff said the radioactive-fat test might indicate artery disease before any zigns ppear, permitting precautions. The slower use of fats is found in persons with high amounts fat, cholesterol, in lood, but no outward signs of heart disease.

CHLOROTHISZIDE, a new drug, is highly effective in relieving waterlogging of body tissues in congestive heart failure and some other diseases, said Drs. John E. Laragh and Felix Demartini of Presbyterian Hospital, New York. It speeds up elimination of salt. Excess salt is responsible for holding water in body tissues.

A new surgical technique is partly solving the tragic problem of babies born with mixedup blood vessels. The mix-up sends dark blood laden with carbon dioxide flowing through their bodies, while refreshed red blood is shunted uselessly between the lungs and heart.

Payoffs

WASHINGTON (P) _ Senate Rackets Committee counsel said Saturday the committee has evidence of "payeffs and shakedowns" involving some employers under investigation in its current hearings.

Chief Counsel Robert F. Kennedy declined to name any of the employers in advance of public hearings resuming Monday. But he said he knows of no such allegations against Sears Roebuck & Co., the immediate object of the committee's in-

Kennedy said evidence to be disclosed will show that "often there is a very narrow divid-ing line between what is a shakedown and what is a pay-off" made willingly to buy favored treatment.

He said the committee also will explore in hearings next week "an extensive list of labor union officials" who accept-ed favors from Nathan W. Shefferman, whom Kennedy calls a "union busting special-ist."

WITNESS AFTER witness at the hearings has talked about Shefferman, head of Labor Relations Associates, Inc. of Chicago, and Shefferman's alleged antiunion activities on behalf of employers.

A Sears vice president, Wallace Tudor, told the committee Friday he blamed Shefferman and some Sears officials for having gone against the com-pany's policies in employing what Tudor called "inexcusable, unnecessary and disgraceful" practices in efforts to block abor unions from Sears stores in the Boston area. Tudor called those "isolated episodes, contrary to principle and said the company mainly has good relations with its 205,000 employes. He said Sears no longer uses Shefferman's

Satan Worship and Voodoo Hold Sway in Modern Times

Black Magic Still Brews

By the Associated Press

Beneath modern man's synthetic suit beats a heart as fearful and credulous as his medieval ancestor's. He can split the atom, but often as not, deep inside he still believes in devils.

Today not many people with hex appeal are consigned to the flames for trafficking with Satan. But in Europe from the 15th to the 18th centuries 300,000 to several million accused witches—historians vary—were burned, boiled, drowned, hanged, strangled, flayed alive and tortured to

Admittedly, we have made progress.

Many a modern, fingering the rabbit's foot in his pocket as he talks, will insist witchcraft has died out altogether, except perhaps for voodoo among remote, primitive peoples.

The truth seems to be, however, that the darkest practices of black magic have gone underground in civilized societies, leaving exposed on the surface a scattering of apparently harmless superstitions.

AN ANTHROPOLOGIST concentrating on European witchcraft, Margaret A. Murray, has written that the god or gods of an old religion become the devil or devils of the new. She advanced the theory that what we call witchcraft was a religion of the people which was eventually over-come by Christianity, although the struggle lasted until the 18th Century.

The worship is generally believed to have centered around a god appearing as a man or animal at the witches' meetings, or sabbaths. High spot of the sabbath was celebration of the black mass, followed by sexual orgles.

The black mass, a blasphemous paredy of the Roman Catholic mass—with black candles, inverted crucifix, liturgy mumbled backward and on the altar often the naked body of a female worshipper—is apparently still with us.

Robert Fabian, former inspector of Scotland Yard says
the practice of black magic is spreading rapidly and that there is more active satan worship today than in the Dark

Even in America, some writers on the occult insist, black masses are said, attracting the mentally unbalanced, the perverts, the thrill seekers and once in a long while some-one who honestly wants to study what mankind is capable of. But admittance is hard to come by-you have to "know

MORE PREVALENT in this country is voodoo, an African fetish religion that spread to Haiti and around the world. Here it crops up in sections of the South and in the poorer districts of large cities.

Police are familiar with the voodoo conjer bag—containing a mixture of powerful devil-repellants such as graveyard dirt, hair, parts of animals, perhaps human fat—worn around the necks of various petty criminals they've arrested. Psychiatrists at mental hospitals in the New York area say that British West Indians carry voodoo around as a part of their culture and it's sometimes hard to tell where mental illness begins and the belief in black magic leaves off.

In New York City's Harlem, specialists in either putting on hexes, or curses, or taking them off do a brisk trade.

Voodoo covers a multitude of practices—from killing or maining an enemy by sticking pins in a doll or slowly melting a waxen image, to making love potions.

Right now in a Vineland, N. J., jail, Juan Rivera Aponte, a 47-year-old farm laborer, awaits trial on a murder charge involving the death of a 13-year-old boy. Police say Aponte told them he had been studying black magic and needed a skull to grind into powder to use in a potion to enable him to cast spells on women,

AS FOR VOODOO DEATH, doctors say there are many well documented cases of a perfectly healthy person lying down and dying after being informed he is bewitched and

Most psychologists think suggestion is at the bottom of voodoo success. They say the victim first has to believe in witchcraft, and then be told he will die. He does the rest his deep feelings of guilt will.

In America the part of the country often thought the most witchcraft-prone is the Pennsylvania Dutch farming

So-called hex signs, those colorful geometrical designs on barns and over doorways, are frequently pointed out as magic supposed to keep out devils. Most authorities on the Pennsylvania Dutch, however, insist they're simply decoraremsylvatian Dutch, nowever, insist they're simply decorative. In scoffing at the hex sign myth, one writer admitted magic was practiced in the area, but very secretly. The Pennsylvania Dutch farmer, he said, would never parade his mysterious doings for the uninitiated to see.

form he had given his devoted wife. The uniform was her

DRIVER MICKEY THOMPSON brings the test car to a stop over three rubber barricade posts. The car is riding over the first two, in this picture, and is about to hit the third. The first barricade has lifted the rear of the car off the pavement.—(Staff Photos by Don Webster.)

New Rubber Barricades Tested in Traffic Safety

Highway deaths and injuries may be cut in the future by new rubber barriers tested here Friday.

The elastic guard posts being developed by the United States Rubber Co. were demonstrated to a group of safety, traffic law enforcement authorities at the Lions Associ ated Drag Strip, 223rd and Alameda Sts.

Officials of the rubber company emphasized the project is still entirely experimental.

The tests, however, produced encouraging results.

THE GUARDS USED are hollow rubber posts standing four feet high and anchored firmly in cement. Outside diameter of the posts used Friday was 8 inches with a 3 inch inside diameter.

Drag strip manager and race driver Mickey Thompson, firmly strapped into the test car, drove into the posts at speeds from 25 to 45 miles an hour.

The car ran over the springy barricades which popped up behind as soon as it has passed. The posts kept damage to the car to a minimum, definitely slowed it down and, according to Thompson idited him only slightly. according to Thompson, joited him only slightly.

"THERE WAS practically no shock," Thompson said. I'd be glad to drive into them at 50 without the safety belts." he offered. "I think it would be quite safe."

Purpose of the rubber posts is to substitute them for conventional barricades on curves, at freeway interchanges and between opposing traffic lanes.

After more testing to determine just how resilient the posts should be, some may be placed in service in the area for further experimentation.

MALCOLM EPLEY

YOUNG ARTISTS of the local elementary schools have been having a great time decorating store windows with drawings depicting the work of the Community Chest. Some mighty fancy produc-tions have resulted from this little project, designed to advertise the Chest campaign and to make the youngsters aware of the contributions of Chest agencies to community

The enthusiastic young fellow who drew a picture on glass in the front of the Independent, Press-Telegram building did a fine art job, but apparently got a little mixed up on Chest agencies. His picture showed a Red Cross station wagon. The Red Cross is not a Chest agency and raises its finances in a separate campaign. But anyway, it was a good picture.

The drawing on a window at Penney's made a nice hookup with a regular sign there advertising the store's air conditioning. The picture shows a camping scene, and over it the words: AIR CONDITIONED COMMUNITY CHEST TY CHEST.

WHITTIER COLLEGE professor claims a unique distinction: He taught Vice President Richard Nixon to ory.

Dr. Albert Upton, an English professor at Whittier, was directing dramatic productions at the college when Nixon was a student there. Young Dick had a role in a play which called for a good cry, and at the start of re-hearsals, he failed miserably to produce the required tears. Upton, who visited friends here the other eve and recalled the incident, took Nixon under his wing. After a great deal of personal coaching, he managed to make Dick one of the best criers that ever trod the boards at Whittier.

THERE IS, as you may know, a rule against taking pets on Long Beach buses. But there are ways of getting around any rule, and so this story about a boy and a dog at Belmont Shore.

They were first observed by my operative when the boy came out of a store with his father, carrying a big card-board box. The dog was asleep on the sidewalk.

They crossed the street, the son leading the dog, and sat down on a bus bench. After a while the boy unsnapped the dog's leash, lifted the animal and placed him in the box. He then started to close the flaps at the top.

The dog objected and kept popping his head up, much to the amusement of others on the bench. Finally the dog gave up, the top was closed and the boy leaned a casual elbow on the box.

When the bus came along the father carrying the groceries and the boy carrying the boxed dog boarded it and rode away.

That's how it was done. My observer on the scene, Col. Davy Crockett, resisted a temptation to add a final touch, in his report, "I wish I could say that the box was marked 'fresh frankfurters'," he said. "But doggone it, such was not the case.'

TT TAKES no fancy viewing sport nor a pair of powerful binoculars to see Sput-nik's rocket, I discovered the other eve. I saw the rocket as easily as I might see airplane lights in an evening sky.

After Atty, Don Wallace told me of seeing the flying Russian light from a vantage point in Rolling Hills, I con sidered going out there. But I didn't have time, so at the announced hour just went up on top of my garage.

It was just dusk and the planet Venus was very bright in the southwestern sky. Remembering Wallace's advice, I kept my peepers directed that

And sure enough, I presently spied a moving spot of light, high in the sky, moving from the vicinity of Venus in a mortheasterly direction. I didn't get the impression of streak-ing speed. It glided, and eventually faded out in a smoggy haze after it had moved to a sector of the sky almost directly north. I had it in view about 50 or 60 seconds

After it disappeared, I went down from my garage roof and ate a hearty dinner;

Angels to L.B. Move Gains Momentum

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH

Possible movement of the Los Angeles Dodgers' franchise in the Pacific Coast League to Long Beach gathered mo-mentum Saturday with two important developments:

1. Dodger vice president Buzzy Bavisi indicated that he would visit Long Beach to inspect this city's Blair Field, .. unless the press of business on this whirlwind trip West absolutely stops me."

Bavasi expressed interest in a shift of the Dodgers' PCL club to Long Beach in his first press conference Thursday. Developments of the past 48 hours indicate there are five Developments of the past 45 nours indicate there are the important reasons why the Dodgers might relocate their PCL team in Long Beach, remembering, of course, that any such move would have to be approved by the Coast League and—this is of extreme importance—would be contingent upon the circuit remaining an open classification league

The reasons why the Dodgers would find it feasible to move the Angel club to Long Beach follow:

important matter of getting sued by the Coast League. (The Coast League is hopeful of securing a large sum in damages from the Dodgers for "invasion" of this territory, but if the Dodgers maintain a PCL club in this area, legal men believe they might not be sued-or at least not for a great sum.)

2. A move to Long Beach would keep the "little club" near the "big club" in Los Angeles. The Dodgers want a site close to Los Angeles to maintain a close watch on the open classification club.

3. Fans would have baseball—and good baseball—the summer round. The Long Beach "Angels" would play at home only when the Dodgers are on the road. The caliber of players would remain high, since the personnel would be those who are just a shade below major league ball.

4. Long Beach is in the heart of a fremendously fast-growing community. The population is right here, with 1,100,000 people in southern Los Angeles County and Orange County from which to attract fans.

5. Long Beach has a new park, The park itself—Blair Field—has been tabbed by op-ponents of a Long Beach move as the principal reason why the Dodgers will NOT settle in Long Beach. The seating capacity-3,700-has been hit as greatly inadequate for a PCL team.

Bavisi said Saturday that the Dodgers would require "only 6,000 or 7,000 seats" in any park they might settle, but Blair Field's capacity can be expanded to 7,000—or even 10.000—seats. This could be accomplished by the addition of bleacher seats (which would start nine feet from the ground level) just outside the outfield wall and which would encircle

The Century Club informed Dodger President Walter O'Malley Saturday that land was available for construction of a permanent Dodger organization training camp in this Long Beach's sports development organization suggested to O'Malley that a location might be centered in the Long Beach-Orange County area which would have plenty of parking space, hotel or dormitory accommodations, restaurant facilities and a suitable number of playing fields, all new and all devoted exclusively to the Dodgers.

This site also might be considered as a home for the Long Beach "Angels."

Meanwhile, the Long Beach "story" was being chanted son wrote from San Francisco that Long Beach was one of five cities mentioned prominently in PCL realignment plan-ning. The others were Phoenix, Salt Lake City, Denver and

He repeated the fact that franchises for Los Angeles and San Francisco, plus Hollywood, must be shifted if the PCL is to remain an open classification circuit,

Phoenix would absorb the San Francisco club, the Giants having bought the Phoenix franchise with the purpose of putting a PCL team there, while Salt Lake City would be the strongest other possibility to obtain the Angel team. Much light should be shed on this situation at the PCL meeting Friday in Sacramento.

In other developments Saturday, O'Malley met with Bill Nicholas, general manager of the Coliseum, and they agreed to continue with studies that might make it possible for major league baseball to be played in the 102,000-seat Los Angeles stadium; and Charley Dressen said he probably would "know for sure" Monday whether he would become an assistant to the manager of the Dodgers or accept offers from two other major league clubs.

LOS ANGELES COLISEUM The football fortunes of the University of Southern California, once the proud king of collegiate football, plunged to their lowest ebb here Saturday when the winless Trojans suffered their fifth consecutive defeat in blowing a one-point, 13-12, decision to Washington State in the most sloppily played game of the local season, but the most exciting.

A crowd of 24,902 fans saw the Trojans "achieve" the du-bious honor of establishing a new school record for losing streaks with their poorest ballhandling of the year as they lost the ball six times on fum-bles . . . and also their failure to make good on three placekicks.

Sports Merry-Go-Round By HANK HOLLINGWORTH From the Secret Effect

When I came to the Long Beach area eight years ago, one of the first comments I heard was "Long Beach is a poor sports town." One of the second comments was "many people in Long Beach take a constant negative attitude toward anything constructive in sports. Although I have had occasion to see both remarks accentuated, I am inclined to believe at this moment that only The second comment remains true, LONG BEACH IS NOT A POOR SPORTS TOWN, BUT RATHER A TOWN OF POOR SPORTS!

A squad of sob sisters in Long Beach has done more to injure sports in this city than any fixed apathy. The sobbers came out in force within the past 48 hours when the new broke that the Dodgers were considering movement of their Doast League team to Long Beach.

These negative people, under the guise of "being in on the facts," sobbed that it was ridiculous to think the Dodgers were serious in contemplating a move to Long Beach. None of these solid citizens, incidentally, attended the press conference at which Long Beach was mentioned.

WHETHER OR NOT THE DODGERS EVER MOVE THEIR ANGEL TEAM TO LONG BEACH IS BESIDE THE POINT THE FACT IS THAT THEY ARE CONSIDER-

ING THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH A MOVE.

I know the Dodgers are considering other possibilities, ·also, and the Long Beach plan may never go beyond the stage It is right now. But, Long Beach's great army of sports fans should be honored that the Dodgers even gave thought to the possibility of moving their potentially largest farm club— the erstwhile L. A. Angels—to Long Beach.

THE SOUR-APPLE BRIGADE pulled out all the stops in attempts to "pooh pooh" an Angel move to Long Beach. Let's look as some reasons they think would make such a 1. Long Beach's new park can seat only 3,700 fans, whereas 10,000 seats are needed. Toss this one in the garbage can.

The Dodgers need only 7,000 seats and Blair Field can be expanded to that number (see story on first sports page.)

2. A minor league club cannot exist "in the shadow of the Dodgers." The Dodgers are willing to take that chance with a population of 1.100,000 from which to draw in this area. They think they could attract enough fans to perhaps meet ex-"penses, but they would be accomplishing one objective: Keep-ing their top farm club near the "big team's" headquarters.

 Cost of expanding Blair Field would be $400,000, lights re running $125,000. I was given an estimate of light costs Saturday that hit the $75,000 figure, slicing $50,000 off that over-all sum immediately. I was given assurance, too, that the $400,000 figure was "much too high."

4. There are no box seats in Blair Field. The Dodgers are Taware of this and realize it is a drawback, but claim it would not be a major factor IF they decided (and were allowed by the Coast League) to settle in Long Beach.

I'm sure the sobbers would wail on into the night, but their lake of tears already has reached the top of my boots!

ONLY TWO WRITERS were present when Dodger veep Buzzy Bavisi broached the "Long Beach situation" Thursday — a Los Angeles columnist and myself. The L. A. writer landed his story on Page One, while mine was splashed in the L. P-T.

So it was with amusement Saturday that I learned a certain radio announcer had claimed on his program the night before that I had "blown the Dodger story out of pro-While the story was being unfolded quietly, this portion." While the story was being unioned quietly, this gentleman was not even at the press conference. He arrived later, builted down a few "cool ones," then commenced to gripe because he thought he had the flu.

The radio man—he is a neophyte commist, too—charged that he heard only one sentence about Long Beach while he was at the conference in Bavisi's suite at the Sheraton Town House. He was so right—but that's what happens to a fellow who has the flu and doesn't get to a press conference ahead of time. The man just doesn't learn all that is taking place.

On my desk Saturday was this charming note: Dear Manager—Representing the great Press-Telegram

The plan discussed is to legalize gambling (a la Las Vegas) in Tijuana for a week with most of the proceeds going to the Mexican Red Cross. On top of that, there would be buildights, horse racing, dog racing, jai slai and other events capped by the "dream fight."

The week-long carnival of sports featuring the fight and scored two of the Spartans' open gambling was hailed by those at the meeting as possibly touchdowns and set up the becoming an annual affair rivaling or even surpassing New third one.

Marciano, of course, is slightly different than the Robinson, on the Spartans' 27 on the Joe Louis and other big spenders. Rocky is said to border on the second play after the second frugal. He's never lived very high, and doesn't need as much half kickoff and it took the money as the Sugar Rays and the Brown Bombers.

But the fight game itself has never been convinced that Marciano was serious about his retirement, which was brought on by a series of developments, revealed here a couple of times before, and which was featured by a feud between Rocky's ex-manager, Al Weill, and the IBC's Jim Norris and his Basociates.

That has been the case up to now. D'Amato is attempting to wrest control of the fight game away from Norris and the IBC with Patterson, but until he can "sell" Patterson to the fight public as a topnotch champion, he won't be able to make much inroads on the IBC, which is able to maintain its dominance in the boxing world with such popular men as Robinson and Carmen Basilio as well as controlling the two nationally-televised fight shows.

The IBC wants the heavyweight title back not only to solidify its position, but to rid itself of D'Amato's "nuisance value."

Whether or not D'Amato falls for the Flaherty-Machen maneuver remains to be seen. However, the betting is that he will agree to a Machen bout sometime next year . . because the Patterson-Rademacher fiasco in Seattle has sent the "angels" running into hiding with their bankroils. ## Some Questions About Fund Drives

MR. I. KRIMM of 2416 E. Pacific Coast Highway, Long Beach, writes:

'For the last couple of decades the American public has been subjected to various drives for money for charities and medical research. Disregarding the purposes of these drives, here are some questions: Do the people who conduct the drives ever give out reports to the donors on how the money is disbursed? What are the salaries of the organizations' personnel? Do they ever invite the donors to participate in the planning of these disbursements? Is there any sense in giving money without knowing whether it is used properly or wasted indiscriminately?'

With regard to the last question, the answer obviously is: No.

IF HE WANTS TO GIVE wisely, Mr. Krimm. should give to established charities and organizations headed by local people who are available and accountable. Let's look, for example, at Community Chest, which collects for 31 different health, welfare, and youth agencies located right here in this com-

Estimated expenses are submitted annually to the Chest by the various agencies. These estimates come from boards of directors made up of volunteer local citizens who receive no salaries. The proposals are considered by a Chest budget committee which is also composed of local volunteers.

Collected funds go to Chest headquarters. They are checked by volunteer auditors, rechecked by the headquarters staff, and audited by a certified public accounting firm. An accounting firm audits Chest finances at the end of each year. Each member of the Chest board of directors gets a monthly financial statement. The books of the Chest are open to the public for examination at any time, and each year an accounting of funds is circulated through the newspapers, by leaflets, and in public meetings.

Where does the money go? The Community Chest collected $807,112 for the current year. Eighty-nine per cent of the money allocated went to the 31 agencies supported by the Chest, (Largest recipient: youth service, $348,108.) Eleven per cent represented the cost of conducting the campaign, the cost of yeararound administration of the Chest, and the Chest public information program. Salaries accounted for a little more than half of the cost of campaign and administration—a cost, incidentally, which was below the national average for Community-Chest-United Fund operations. And, of course, Mr. Krimm realizes that thousands of his friends and neighbors work many long hours without pay aiding the staff workers.

Mr. Krimm's questions are perfectly legitimate ones. If more persons took the trouble, as he has, to find out the answers, the work of collecting funds for Community Chest and other bona fide agencies would be a great deal easier.

AT 5:19 P.M., a sleek silver sports car turned north on Knott from Garden Grove Blvd. Behind the wheel was 43-year-old Walter Podolak, of 888 Linda Vista Ave., Pasadena. He was going home, and the low-slung car accelerated smoothly as he pressed the throttle.

Ahead, traveling north at 40 miles an hour on the narrow road, was another car, driven by Mrs. Rose Hatcher, 29, of 11561 Santa Marie Ave., Stanton.

As he approached, Podolak decided to pass the slower ear, and Coy Abercromble had less than 15 seconds left.
The sports car pulled out into the southbound traffic lane. Coming toward him, Podolak saw the car driven by Mrs. Abercrombie. His car surged forward, and drew abreast of Mrs. Hatcher, slammed on his brakes. Less than 200 feet ahead, Mrs. Abercrombie did the same.

Both cars began to skid.

The sports car slid for 25 feet before crossing the white line, cut sharply in front of Mrs. Hatcher, and slid 27 feet more toward a point 1056 feet north of Garden Grove Blvd. Mrs. Hatcher braked and swerved to-ward the ditch. There was no shoulder on the northbound lane, and she had no choice.

Mrs. Abercrombie's car skidded for 45 feet, careened soft shoulder for 90 feet as she attempted to stop, and then hurtled broadside 53 feet across the road into the northbound lane.

The two cars crashed at 5:20 p. m.

Podolak's car was knocked eight feet backwards by le impact. Mrs. Abercrombie's car bounced over his hood and overturned in the eight-foot ditch, facing Seconds later, Mrs. Hatcher's car crashed on top of it. Coy Abercrombie died instantly under the wreckage. So did his brother and sister.

And the memories were born.

Of course, there were questions. Highway patrolmen measured, and wrote down names and addresses. Statements were taken; reports were

More questions were asked at a coroner's inquest in Santa Ana on Sept. 20, and Podolak was accused of negligent driving. The same questions will be asked again on Tuesday, when Podolak faces jury trial in Anaheim municipal court on charges of manslaughter From the answers, the jury will decide how the accident happened, and who was to blame. But for Mrs. Abercrombie, and for Podolak, the most important question will never be answered.

Except, perhaps, in their hearts. The question is "Why?"

Boom Due to Level

Estimates announced by the apanese transportation ministry show that both receipts and outlay for the half-year ending Sept. 30 are up about 11 per cent over the preceding six months.

However, points out Capt. C. M. Boyd, president of the Wilmington Transportation Co., pre-depreciation profits are ex-pected to be down about 4.3 per cent, based on analyses of balance sheets of 53 Japanese shipping companies.

DURING HIS TWO-WEEK apan visit. Boyd also learned that the Nippon Yusen Kaisha Line, whose ships are regular callers here, will build a 32,000-

You give them far more than beautiful music

Like most families, you'll be enchanted by the beautiful tones of the Hammond Organ. You'll delight in its variety and responsiveness.

And, you'll give everyone in your family the opportunity to play. Within a month even those with little or no musical background can be playing lovely selections. Just as thousands of Hammond Organ owners already have.

A Hammond Organ costs less than many fine pianos. Takes no more space than a small desk. It never goes out of tune and plugs into any electrical outlet. Come in today for full details and a complete demonstration.

WITH SAFETY AND SATISFACTION

[1] Deal with a concern with a reputation over the years for fair dealing. Be sure the title is clear.

Buy a car with only one previous owner, Original owners invariably take better care of their cars. See the maintenance record.

Put the car on a haist and examine it in, out and under for signs of wreck or flood damage.

Have the car tested on your dealer's, Dynamometer. Get a written and signed report of its condition.

Consider the difference between your pres ent car and the one you are thinking of buying rather than only its price or the appraisal of yours.

Figure the interest and insurance charges. Be sure they are not exorbitant.

Remember, the guarantee is no better than the reputation of the dealer you are buying from.

See the dependable values listed herewith. Because of condition, guarantee, price, etc., they are, every one, a plus valuel

Come in now for a peek at the '58 Chevrolet!

All you do is stop by your Chevrolet dealer's and ask for a preview. He'll show you a booklet containing advance information about the '58 Chevrolet! Here's just a hint of some of the things you can expect to see:

The 1958 Chevrolet will be completely and spectacularly new. It will be decidedly lower and wider-and much, much longer. It will be built around a new principle in body-frame design.

It will offer an entirely new V8 engine, so radical that it even looks different. This new engine will bring you a new pinnacle of performance and astonishing new smoothness.

The new Chevrolet will have amazing advances in comfort and ride, including Full Coil suspension and, for the first time in the Chevrolet field, the incredible softness of a real air ride.

There will be fabulous style touches-for example, an all-new gull-wing effect in the wrap-back of the rear fenders. The line will also offer two new super models of exceptional luxury, beauty and distinction.

These few highlights are the merest clues to what's new with the new Chevrolet. Stop in at your Chevrolet dealer's and take a peek. You can also place your order for an early delivery. You'll be in the limelight as a '58 Chevrolet-Firster.

DODGE TRUCKS HERE

Steeper than any grade on any federal highway in the nation is this 32 per cent test grade which a 1958 T700 Dodge tandem tractor is pulling. This 218 horsepower unit has a gross vehicle weight rating of 32,000 pounds and agross combination weight rating of 55,000 pounds. The 1958 line of Dodge trucks is being displayed at local dealers Glenn E. Thomas Dodge-Plymouth and Verne Holmes Dodge.

They Dress the Nation

It's the power behind the throne that counts. And when the figures tally upwards of 500 million dollars each year, and the industry is the fourth largest in the state, then it's understandable when Marjorie Carne, super-super ca-reer gal says, "I adore my work." Her queenly throne is that of fashion coordinator for California Fashion Creators, an organization serving more than 375 apparel manufacturers of women, men and children's clothing, all with the California label. And her power is the influence she wields in publicizing West wields in publicizing Coast designers and manufacturers. The 4,000 buyers who attend the two market weeks each year in January and June in Los Angeles and the newspaperwomen gather the first week in November to view the designers' spring creations, are her loyal subjects.

CONVERGING ON the Beverly Hilton Hotel next Sunday, where they will be guests of CFC for a week, will be 100 fashion and women's editors from daily newspapers across the country. They will view during the daylight hours more than 2,000 styles in swimwear, sportswear, afternoon and evening clothes. Each day stories will be sent by Western Union by these editors to their newspapers. At the end of each Press Week it is estimated that millions of have been written about California fashions. Is it any wonder Los Angeles County is the second largest fashion center in the world?

Of course, the real power of this dynasty is Miss Carne's boss, William Max-field, who is responsible for the over-all program of CFC acting as its executive direc-"He is the ideal employer," she says, "searching for new ideas and always willing to go along with my willing to suggestions."

MAXFIELD and his petite wife, Nadine, are the dip-lomats of Press Week. He handles all major problems (fortunately there are few because of his staff's efficiency); Nadine is the needle and thread department for the girls and their chief confidante; last year she was acting nurse to several of the editors who were laid low with colds. But as Maxfield says, "We've never lost a fashion editor yet."

The behind-the-scenes operation is almost as complicated as Queen Elizabeth's recent visit. Maxfield and Miss Carne begin planning six months in advance. First they must decide on a hotel that can accommodate the editors, provide facilities for wiring stories, have large conference rooms available for the 10 or 15 fashion shows each day, and dressing rooms for the models.

After this is out of the way, they formulate the after-hour "fun" events — such as trips to movie

Socialites to Wine, Dine at Headdress Ball Saturday

By JOYCE KENT

Long Beach today is reminiscent of the na-tion's capital a few weeks ago as socialites here duplicate efforts of Washingtonians to find "just the right dress" for the grand ball.

While Washington's tizzy was inspired by the visit of Queen Elizabeth, Long Beach socialites have been shopping in anticipation of the season's outstanding local social event. the seventh annual Headdress Ball next Saturday night in the Lafayette Hotel Grand Ballroom.

Sponsored by Long Beach Auxiliary to the Southern California Symphony Assn., the event promises fabulous gowns to match the evening's headdresses and golden decor inspired by the theme of "Le Bal International."

Leading the fashion parade will be Mrs. Albert Steven-son, ball chairman, wearing a finely pleated hand-woven black Irish linen ball gown with voluminous floor-length white satin stole, both made for her in Dublin, Ireland, by for her many.
Sybil Connolly.

MR. AND MRS. Stevenson will entertain at cocktails for a large group of friends in the hotel's Red Velvet Room prior to the ball.

Among those included on the invitation list are Messrs. and Mmes. "I like hosiery colors to blend with the says Miss Bonnie Cashin, whose name is synonymous with the fabulous leather coats and distinctive casual clothes she designs. Miss Cashin adds, "This season the darker shades look smartest, and for late afternoon, no stocking looks more elegant than sheer, seamless

Dark hosiery also is endorsed by Count Sarmi, who creates beautiful daytime and evening clothes for Elizabeth Arden's customers, The models who show his street clothes wear deep-toned hosery with seams and heels tapering to a point; for evening they wear seamless sheers, dark or pale tinted, depending on the color of the gown or dinner dress.

. . . . BECAUSE SHE is a real out-door type, Jeanne Campbell's suits and sports clothes reflect her love of freedom and comfort. Whenever her arduous schedule permits, Miss Campbell spends hours in the sun, thus preserving her enviable tan. Dark hosiery shades are the only ones she finds becoming on her well-browned legs. "Many other women," she says, "with similar tans will welcome the wider/selection of dark colors as they choose their hosiery wardrobes."

With the enthusiastic approval of all four of these designers, Kayser has launched for fall a new smoldering tone called "Chivalry." This rich, blackened taupe is available in both seamless and seamed styles at fine stores everywhere.

Wilson Homecoming for 'East End' Kids

ALL THE old familiar places will be filled with all the old familiar faces at Wilson High School next Friday when Homecoming Day rolls around for 1957. It's to be on the grand scale this year, Familiar Faces spotlighting, in particular, the class of '32 which will be celebrating its silver anniversary. The fun will start at noon.

Familiar Faces

Other classes will be especially honored, too, on the skip every five years basis and for each class there's a fellow in charge. Rounding up the class of '27, for instance, is Cliff Meyer. The 1932 crowd is being exhorted to be there by Norman Masterson; '37-Lincoln Ball; class of '42-Loren Evans; class of '47-Richard Manuex; and class of '52-Jim Johnnie.

It's a crime to let the cat out of the bag but among those old enough to claim '32 who are still in town and ought to be there are Frank Beaver, Earl Dykstra, Mary (McPherson) Jagerson, Vincent Reel, George Atkin-son, Phil Wiedrich, Bill Wagner, Phil Brady, son, Phil Wiedrich, Bill Wagner, Phil Brauy, Kenneth R. Davis, Howard Gregson, Morris Hayter, George Hart, Jack London, Betty (Poulson) Wentworth, Jimmy Pine, Don Raney, Floy Violette and Don Tucker. IT'S TRUE Suzanne Leebrick is expecting. But not what happened the other day when a bevy of friends gathered on her new doorstep in Rossmore, arms filled with packages, to honor her at a surprise baby shower and kaffee klatch. Sharon Hilleary was hostess and guests (who proved that women can so keep secrets!) were Jo Ann Parks, Pat Denny, Mary Lintz, Margaret Wallace, Shirley Standard, Carmen Parrish, Bindy Vosburg, Beverly Henderson, Ann Blanchard and Nancy Leebrick.

Audrey Vail Plans Summer Marriage

Dr. and Mrs. Herbert H. Vail entertained immediate family members at cocktails and dinner last weekend to announce the engagement of their charming daughter, Audrey Beverly, to Roger Lee Hendrix of Los Angeles.

The betrothal was revealed when individual pale pink petits fours inscribed with names of the engaged pair were served to the assembled guests.

Dinner table centerpiece was an arrangement of aris-tocrat roses flanked by pink tapers in silver candelabra. Plans are being made for summer, 1958, wedding.

Bachelorettes heard of the engagement of their fellow member with the offering of the traditional chocolates at a meeting Monday.

If you have ever toured with an opera company, especially in England, where it rains every day, nine months out of the year, you will know that life can be very drab. Were it not for the dazzling lights of the theater and the joyous sound of long applause, the experience of an opera singer would be unbearable.

At 6 o'clock, the principal singers performing that evening would gather in the cavern-like dining room of the Midlands Hotel to par-take of a semblance of dinner. Nerves were too taut to really enjoy anything-but on the advice of my teacher, Jean de Reszke, I always ordered a steak and a cup tea. At such times I often had the company of my favorite conductor, Sir John Barbirolli (he was not knighted when I was with the company). He seemed like a young 20-year-old, although actually he was 2 years of age. He asked me once: "Do you remember the first words you spoke to me? You said: 'Mr. Barbirolli, aren't you very young to be conducting an opera company? I ate those words many times as I worked with him and dis-covered how really great he

SUCH A gifted lad! A graduate of Trinity College, he made his debut as a cello soloist with orchestra in Queen's Hall, London, His father had been an orchestra player in Italy and his mother was French. Small of stature with fine dark eyes, he had a mass of shiny black hair which was constantly falling over one eye. How many times have I seen him pushing it back with his left hand while giving the "down beat" with the right hand.

conductors I never knew such a studious one as John Bar-birolli. Rarely was he seen without a score under his arm. He was constantly constantly studying, And with reason competing as he was with such conductors in our com-pany as Sir Malcolm Sargent, Sir Adrian Boult and Sir Thomas Beecham. And of all the conductors with whom I sang; John Barbirolli was the most kind. His soft-spoken voice was never raised in anger (a rare thing among conductors). His great aim seemed to be to bring out harmony in the music and good will among his associa tes. * * * *

A PARTICULARLY difficult spot in "Tosca" and one in the quintet in "Dei Meistersinger" always troubled To this day I can see young Barbirolli leaning far over the conductor's stand toward me with both hands leading me and inspiring me.

That, I can never forget.

ONCE WHEN I caught the flu in soggy, dripping Man-chester, my good friend came to my sick room with symencouragement and some delectable fruit.

DEAR ABBY: I am a widower of 63 who is interested in a nice widow woman. She is very good company and we get along fine. Her children are grown and so are mine. I have told her straight out that I was 63, but she never says how old she is, She looks to be about 58 or 60. I could get matrimonial about her but I wonder if you think I should ask her how old she is. It doesn't really matter but I am curious.—CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: If it doesn't matter — don't ask her. If she tells you, add five and marry her anyway.

DEAR ABBY: I am in love with a girl and want to marry her but my parents are trying to break it up because we are of different religions. I don't think they have any right to object because my parents do not practice their own religion and rarely go to church themselves. My girl is devout in her faith and I am not, but I know our love is strong enough to make a go of our marriage even though she goes to her own church and I go to mine. Do you think my parents are being fair, Abby?—PHIL S. DEAR PHIL: Parents who do not practice their own religion should not be surprised when their children want to marry out of their faith. Your parents' objections are sound, however. The family together. that prays together - stays

DEAR ABBY: My husband looks forward to going trout fishing all year. Last year my girlfriend said she saw him in Reno, whooping it up, but I didn't believe her. This year before he left, I taped his fishing line to his reel. After three days, he came back with his limit of trout which I am sure he must have bought in a trout farm because when I looked at his reel it was still taped the way I fixed it. What do you make of this?—C. M.

The ace and queen of diamonds were taken next and dummy's last spade led and trumped.

East was now down to trumps but it did him no good. Rip led a diamond and ruffed with dummy's king. The last club was now played and East could ruff high or

Crown Prince of Garb Leaders in

On the Southern California front, Knute Thorsen is the biggest gun in the constantly raging battle against the Society of the Lazy or Backward, rank and file members of which are known as SLOBs.

Thorsen is executive direcof MAGIC and BAGIC, Men's Apparer Guild in California and Boys' Apparel Guild in California, and holds forth in nest, modern offices at 740 S. Broadway, Los Angeles,

A truly dynamic personality, Thorsen is interested keenly in clothing trends. And right now, he's also pretty burned up.

"I think it's a disgrace the way our young people look," he told me. "In some of our schools today boys dress in sloppy fashion, their clothes are not clean and they wear those ridiculous haircuts. Even some of the girls look pretty sad. They wear pedal pushers to school, if you can imagine that!"

Knute knows whereof he speaks, for he's a native of Los Angeles and was schooled at L. A.'s Polytechnic High. at L. A.'s Polytechnic High.
"And there's another thing."
he said. "It was different
when I went there. They didn't wear things like they do today. The school authofities were rigid—and, incidentally, you could have eaten off the floor in Poly High, it was so clean!" it was so clean!"

IS THERE A SOLUTION? "You bet there is!" Thorsen thundered. "A lot of it could start in the home; but the bulk of it could be done through the schools. The schools could require that if these young people are going to be class or activity leaders that they have to dress well. Make them put their shirts inside their trousers, wear decent haircuts, get their clothes cleaned and have their shoes shined. If they go to a dance, make them wear coats. But you can't start in the last year of high school, you have to catch them early in grammar school."

them to clean up the place!"
Thorsen has devoted his adult life to the clothing business. He was manager of the Pendleton Woolen Mills in Los Angeles for 11 years, leaving only because the firm wanted him to go to Omaha. In 1948 he was president of MAGIC, then took over the executive directorship.

With MAGIC-BAGIC his task is to beat the drums for better dressing and to pro-mote the California market. To help accomplish this he and his organization stage two market weeks a year, in May and October

Till then I was one of Till then I was one of those fortunate people who never had a problem that could not be worked out satisfactorily by myself or with my parents' help.

Now I have a genuine problem, and here it is simple.

ply: I am 22 and in love with a man nearly 50. He shares this love, although perhaps not quite with such youthful intensity.

More than anything, I want to marry him. But...

"It this right?" ... "Could I make him happy?" ...
these are questions that trouble me. This man has long been a good friend of my parents. But because we live at opposite ends of the California coast, the friend-ship has been one of a state of heart and mind rather than of day-to-day contact.

He has been a widower two years, has a fine son of 12 who has been affected deeply by the long illness of his mother. While his wife was living, I wasn't aware of any feelings other than admiration for him. My path of love is the kind that grad-ually has changed a little girl's here worship into a young woman's love.

Now about myself. . . . I have been blessed, indeed! Beauty, luxury, experience that comes from being one among seven children, a college graduate. He, by the is a successful and highly prosperous lawyer.

I have given men my own age a chance at my heart ... fraternity pins, proposals, But all I wanted of them, I found, was a pleasant friendship. Notbing more until this real love came into my life.

If you advise me against this marriage, I can't say truthfully I'll follow your advice. But I would like to hear what you've learned from experience.

I'd like to know if you personally feel this marriage would have a chance. K. H. D. DEAR K. H. D.:

Of course, it would have a chance. There are lots of May-December—or, in your case, May-October—marriages that have been genuine and lasting love affairs.

One of the first problems that was put to me when I started this column 15 years ago was much like yours. I told the young woman (21) that under the circumstances she had outlined, I thought her marriage to a middle-aged widower (46) had a good chance of succeeding.

They married. She is now 36, he 61, and a letter several weeks ago said they have had a wonderful life to-

The important thing, it seems to me, in joining a marriage of this kind is that both parties folly recognize that it is not the normal, average kind of young love marriage. Therefore, it offers problems all its own. Among these:

1. That it will start out being a more settled, sober marriage than the average happy-go-lucky romance of young couples.

2. That the passionate excitements probably will be fewer and, on the other hand, the inevitable domestic squabbles will be less fiery.
3. That one will become an old man when the woman reaches the flower of her early middle years.

4. That if children do come, they will reach their teen years when the father touches the retirement age, and they will not know the active companionship of more average-age families.

These are, of course, emotional obstacles to such a marriage. But, if knowing this, as I think you do, you still want to marry this man, then I say go ahead with it. And may it be a life-long love affair. M. M.

Instead, it actually is a compliment to their dead mate. For it shows that their former marriage was so happy and inspiring that they are willing to wed again in the hope of recapturing some of that previous joy.

When compatible people like Minnie and this widower fall in love, they will enjoy life far more if they marry.

Marriage also extroverts one's thinking, Married folks tend to be more unselfish and considerate, for we are then trained to think of the wishes of our mate, in addition to our own selfish desires. Unmarried people tend to all the provinces of Canada provided their audiences. After six years on route, however, he settled down, and for a year played with a stock company in Kansas City, Mo. The character actor of the group was Guy Kibbee, It was just prior to his debut into the movies. Then the depression hit

Steven Erickson hopes for a ride as brother Ricki helps him adjust helmet.

Stratojet Wonderland

S. Sgt. Earl Erickson

THERE are children's stories by the dozens on television, radio and in books that open the realm of makebelieve to vivid young imaginations. These stories may be good ones, but they have lost some of their power to compel the delighted attention of Ricki and Steven Erickson.

and Steven Erickson.

Nephews of the author, Ricki and Steven eagerly welcomed his many weekend visits to Long Beach, plying him with questions about the Air Force and the giant jet planes. Then one day recently the boys were asked to spend a day with their uncle at March Air Force Base. To adventurous youngsters. Force Base. To adventurous youngsters, this was almost as exciting as an invitation into the lair of a squadron of friendly, fairy-tale dragons.

Friendly, fairy-tale dragons.

How would you feel, if you were eight, or even five years old and sat behind the wheel of a hoge jet bomber? Expecially if you had gone out into the bright morning of preflight inspection on the flight line wearing your own big, white Air Force helmet?

RICKI AND STEVEN are two of the three sons of Jamie and Valerie Erickson of 6759 Parapet St., Long Beach, Baby Kirk Erickson, not quite a year old, was too young to enjoy the day's activities, but Mom and Dad enjoyed the tour of the Strategic Air Command base every bit as much as the older boys.

Nowadays, rather than the story of the little train engine that kept saying, "I think I can, I think I can . . .", Ricki "I think I can, I think I can . . .", Ricki and Steven demand tales of a confident B-47 Stratojet bomber that roars, "I know I can . . ." The lads have even announced their intention of resigning from school and entering the Air Force. If dreams come true—and sometimes they do—Ricki and Steven Erickson will be flying a really and truly airplane one of these days.

The Birth of Women's Suffrage

By Harry Karns

AITHFULLY EVERY election day, Mrs. Ruth Biles, a Cathedral City real estate broker, walks to her precinct polling place and casts her vote. It is a right she holds in common with 53 million other American women, but she considers it—in a sensea family affair.

The nation's first female vote in a general election s cast 87 years ago by Mrs. Biles' great-grand-

Behind that vote is a dramatic tale of the American frontier. For it was in the West, on the ragged edge of civilization, rather than in the tea parlors of the East, that woman's suffrage was born.

The story has its start in a blizzard in Wyoming Territory on a night in the early spring of 1869.

WILLIAM H. BRIGHT, settler in South Pass and member of the Territorial Legislature, wondered why fate had decided to make this the night.

A sharp-edged wind cut across the land, and the walls of the little shack trembled under the impact of nudden gusts. Snow piled high in the valley, Mrs. Bright was in labor.

South Pass had no doctor. He headed for the home of his nearest neighbor, Mrs. Esther Morris. He half expected that she would refuse to go back with him, and in such weather he wouldn't blame her.

The wind gathered force, and he had to lower his head and ram into it. He arrived at the Morris shack covered with ice and nearly frozen. Mrs. Morris Answered his knock.

He told her: "Betty's going to have her baby. I meed help."

WITHOUT HESITATION Mrs. Morris said: Warm here at the fire, Mr. Bright, while I get bundled up." Within 15 minutes Bright and Mrs. Morris were in the storm and headed toward the Bright shack. They clutched the ends of a piece of rope to keep from getting lost from one another in the howling night,

Struggling through the blizzard with Mrs. Morris, Bright thought of the courage and strength of the relatively few women who came into the rugged West with their men. In almost every case, these women carried their own weight in a so-called man's world.

That was more than he could do in a woman's world, he admitted an hour later.

When they got to his shack, he stood around, help-less and confused, while Mrs. Morris tended his wife. At the height of the blizzard, the baby was born. Mrs. Morris sat through the night caring for mother and child, cooked breakfast for the Brights, then went home to cook breakfast for her own family.

"MRS, MORRIS," SAID BRIGHT before she headed through the drifts left by the departed blizzard, "I don't know how I'll ever repay you."

She answered: "Oh, I'll be asking a favor of you one day, Mr. Bright."

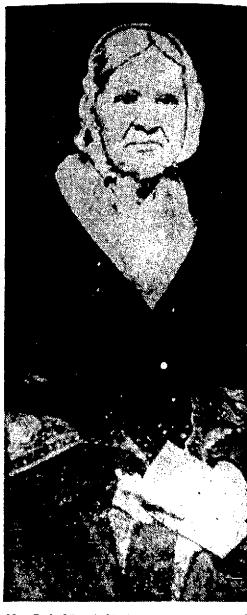

Mrs. Morris had taken an intense interest in the political and social affairs of the Territory. She had long sought to advance female rights, particularly female suffrage. Before Bright left later in the year for the legislature, she asked him the favor.

Bright paid his debt.

HE INTRODUCED THIS revolutionary bill in the Territorial legislature:

"Be it enacted by the council and the House of Representatives of the Territory of Wyoming: "Section 1. That every woman at the age of 18 years residing in the Territory may, at every election

Mrs. Ruth Biles (left), formerly of Long Beach but now of Cathedral City, and her daughter, Mrs. Fern Holliday, of Los Angeles, inspect a story in an old copy of the Long Beach Press-Telegram which led to discovery that they are direct descendants of America's first female voter, Mrs. Eliza A. Swain (above). Mrs. Swain cast the vote Sept. 6, 1870.

to be held under the laws thereof, cast her vote. And her rights to the elective franchise and to hold office shall be the same under the elective laws of the Territory as those of electors."

It turned out that many of Bright's colleagues felt the same way he did about Wyoming women. One delegate climaxed his argument on the measure with this statement:

"If consideration is given to distranchise half of our people, it should not be the better half."

Bright began to believe that the chivalry and conmight began to believe that the chivary and conscience of Wyoming's all-male territorial legislature might open the door to political equality for American women. He turned the keeping of a promise into a cause. A shrewd strategist, he played one party against the other, warning each against taking the responsibility for defeat of a bill that had broad public support. They be colded the apparied support. They heeded the warning.

THE BILL PASSED WITH minor changes and was signed by Gov. John A. Campbell. Thus on Dec. 10, 1869, in Wyoming Territory, women were granted equal voting rights for the first time in American biotecture.

Under the new law, by the way, Mrs, Morris was appointed as the first female justice of peace in history. She had delivered for Bill Bright. Now he de-

Meanwhile, on Sept. 6, 1870, a woman described in Wyoming archives as "a gentle white-haired housewife, Quakerish in appearance," arrived early in the morning at the polls in Laramie. To give her the distinction of being the first woman to vote at a general election, officials opened the polls earlier than usual. The woman, Mrs. Eliza A. Swain, 75, cast her ballot, pulled her should about her choulders smiled ballot, pulled her shawl about her shoulders, smiled serenely, and walked home to her muschold chores. That was Mrs. Biles' great-grandmother—the great-grandmother of women voters.

TWENTY-ONE YEARS AFTER the casting of the TWENTY-ONE YEARS AFTER the casting of the first ballot, Wyoming became a state and retained the equal suffrage clause in its constitution. The movement spread among other western states and territories and traveled to the East, where efforts to establish women's suffrage had been intense but (Continued on Page 12.)

He's Spent $21 Million--Just for Fun!

By Vera Williams

LAST WEEK the 9,474,254th visitor walked through the gates of Disneyland since they were opened

And just for fun-that these visitors might have the time of their lives-$21 millions have been spent on the fabulous playground at Anaheim by its creator, Walt Disney.

That's not all. Says Disney:

"Disneyland never will be completed . . . . It will continue to grow, to add new things, as long as there is imagination, left in the world."

Imagination-that flair of Disney's to project himself back to the interests of childhood and forward to the untouched horizons of science-makes going to Disneyland an unforgettable experience.

NINETY PER CENT of the visitors polled say that they are going back.

"If every world leader could be made to go to Disneyland, there would be no more wars," commented a recent visitor. And the visitor may have spoken the truth: Disneyland has a carefree, happy quality that would rule out war.

Every one who walks Disneyland's streets, or travels on its trains, or rides behind its clop-clopping horses becomes a child again, with a child's wonder at the beautiful, the fantastic, and the enticing worldaround-the-corner.

The dedication plaque located in Town Square at Disneyland sets forth the park's founding principle: "A place for people to find happiness and knowledge."

Happiness is inherent; knowledge is acquired jayously in this place where fantasy and imagination are companions with history and a concrete visualization of the future.

HONEST-TO-GOODNESS castle, from the land of dreams and the pages of history, is approached over a medieval drawbridge. One stops to admire the white and black swans swimming in the moat, until the small fry tug to the music of a King Arthur carrousel. Prancing horses carry 72 young knights and their ladies on a merry-go-round ride on which every rider imagines himself a hero or

Beyond the carrousel is the Mad Hatter's Tea Party where guests spin in a cup and saucer while the Mad Hatter and March Hare debate furiously atop a sugar bowl. To one side, Dumbo, guided by his friend and manager, Timothy Mouse, soars aloft carrying his friends for an aerial ride.

The Casey Jr. Train-as nearly human as a train can get—elmost laughs out loud as it pulls circus cars of merry riders up hill and down dale and over the Canals of the World.

In the Snow White wing of the castle an adventurous ride is taken through the Diamond Mine with Seven Dwarfs.

A NARROW-GAUGE RAILROAD, exact in every detail to the old Santa Fe steam engine, passenger and freight cars, circles Disneyland. Tiny ponies, burros and mules—special stock bred for the park—haul old fashioned horsecars in addition to Conestoga wagons and buckboards.

The Mark Twain, a stern-wheel steamer of the 1800s, plies one of the seven bodies of water.

Gates of Adventureland open on Tahitian seitlement surrounded by tropical flowers, birds and fish. Explorers' boals churn through tropical waters of Mexico, Central and South America, Africa, Asia and Australia. Sharp-eyed passengers can spot wild animals by the dozen. Made of plastic, they move, roar and slither along the banks of the rivers.

Frontierland, fronted by a massive log stockade and inhabited by leatherstocking frontiersmen and Indians, boasts an 1850 Western settlement with board-walk streets, harness shop, general store. Also there is a Wells Fargo station and a stagecoach trip through the Painted Desert.

SYMBOLIZED BY A HUGE SPACE rocket and a city, Tomorrowiand, circa 1986, provides boats and cars of the future. A space terminal allows the adventurous to board a passenger rocket for a trip to the moon. Fortunately, the fare pays for the returning as well as the going.

Those nostalgic for the turn of the century love an old-fashioned ice cream parlor with chairs with wire legs, an old-fashioned apothecary shop, an oldfashioned general store,

Keeping Disneyland in operation takes an average of 2,000 employes. Of these, 1,400 are on the Disney payroll, the remaining 600 hired by lessees in the various shops and exhibits.

Total annual payroll now exceeds $8 million a year.

Disneyland originally represented an investment of 17 million dollars. The present figure of more than $21 million includes $1,800,000 in additions and improvements this past summer.

And what of the future? Remember that Walt Disney said "Disneyland never will be completed. . . . It will continue to grow ... as long as there is imag-ination left in the world."

ON DISNEY'S PLANNING BOARDS are a "Liberty Street" which will depict the story of early America and the Revolutionary War period; New Orleans Square, with a haunted house, wax museum and thieves' market; Science Land, aimed to interest young men and women in science careers; Thomas young men and women in science careers; Thomas Edison Square, which will contrast the home of Edison's time with the home of today and tomorrow, pointing up what Thomas Edison did to make these changes; and a 300-foot diorama of the Grand Canyon.

These "Future Development" projects will be in operation by the summer of 1960, says Walt Disney—maybe before that.

WHAT YOUR NAME MEANS

EAR MISS RULE: Please D tell the origin of the name KELLER from Germany. M.K.M., Long Beach; —E.M.K., McAllen, Texas.

M.K.M. AND E.M.K.: KEL-LER is a German occupational name. Baronial castles and manor houses in the Middle Ages (11th to 16th centuries) usually had wine cellars. A 'Keller' was a femore-"Keller" was a temperate, trusted man who not only kept the cashs of wine and liqueurs in good repair, but he portioned out their contents to the household and the guests. The German Keller family coat-of-arms has three brown eagle heads with gold beaks on a golden shield. The Irish surname Keller, taken from the Gaelic clanname O'Ceileacair meaning "spouse-loving" eulogizes a devoted and companionable hus-band, O'Ceileacair was Anglicized to O'Kelliher and then to

DEAR MISS RULE: Would like the origin, background and crest of the name TUCKER.
—E.A.P., Long Beach.
E.A.P.: Weaving by loom provided interesting English trade-names. Processing of cloth included moistening and pressing it. Those who carried on this work were called Tuckers, Fullers or Walkers. In 1200 all three were used as surnames. A book describing cloth making written in 1563 reads, "clothefuller, otherwise called tucker or walker." The Tucker lineage were most numerous in December 1. Wiltshire and Dorset, Roger de Tuckers lived in Dorset in the late 1200's. The family coat-ofarms has three silver sea horses between five black droplets of pine-pitch on a gold chevron across a shield composed of 10 silver and blue wavy stripes. Morris Tucker of England, who settled in Rhode Island in the 1600s is believed to be the first of the family in America.

DEAR MISS RULE: Would appreciate your analysis of the name LENHART.—MRS. L. C., Long Beach.

MRS. L.C.: The American abbreviation of the German surname Leonhardt is LENHART, Long ago the prevailing custom in Central Europe was to eulogize battle heroes with name that characterized their brav-ery, much as we do today. Leon-Hardt honored and designated a German soldier, "with the strength of a lion." This family achieved a coat-of-arms in the north German city of Frankfurt-Am-Main. Their red shield has two silver fish for an emblem on it.

If YOU have not won your fortune on a '1' quiz program but would still like a million dollars in gold, opportunity keeps right on knocking at your door. You don't have to look for a lost mine or a hinden treasure, whose eiusive location has been a solid block between the hunted and the hunter. The Big Crevice is located below Murders Bar on the American River, near Northern California's old mining camp of Woods Dry Diggin's.

In 1850, after the rich deposit of gold had been washed from the gravels of the American River, a group of miners decided that by diverting the stream from its channel they could work the gravel and obtain the gold normally covered by water. They formed an association to build a flume to carry the water three miles along the cliff of the mountainside.

A man named Morgan represented a group of five gold seekers whose claims were below Murders Bar, In working their claims Morgan discovered the Big Crevice, a crevasse about 12 feet wide and extending back under the south bank of the river to form a cave.

TWO FEET of river gravel was removed from the surface of the crevice and a blue silt was found "which cut like cheese under a knife." Each bucket of the silt was more than half gold dust, producing $1,400 in gold. (Gold was selling at $16 an ounce; at today's price, this amount would be doubled.) The secret of the rich strike was soon known by all, so it was necessary to place armed guards and maintain huge fires to light the area to keep fellow miners from helping themselves to the treasure.

Although Morgan enlarged his crew, there was still a waiting list of men eager for work because, by the end of cach shift, the hi-graders would plaster themselves and their clothing with all the blue mud that would stick to them. When this was panned out, the men often obtained many times their wages in gold dust.

THE CREVICE was worked to a depth of 8 feet by having 12 men form a bucket brigade, while one of them obtained the rich mud from the bottom. After one of the bucket carriers disappeared into the brush it was necessary to place an armed guard over all men who handled the buckets. In the excited fever of this rich gold strike, there is no doubt that a large amount of the mud went "over the hill" and into saloon keepers' tills in return for a swig of hard liquor.

After working the crevice for five days, with the aid of a night shift of bailers, with light from pine torches, the flow of water could not be lowered to permit the man with the bucket to reach the mud at the bottom. The project was abandoned but with no regrets for the men had more gold than any of them were to see again.

IN 1851, a crevice company was incorporated in San Francisco where stock was sold with ease as the fabulous stories of the riciness of the strike were retold. A barge was built on the river, and an engine was shipped by boat to Sacramento where it was necessary to dismantle it before a conveyance could be found large enough to haul it through the mud to Woods Dry Diggin's. Again it was necessary to dismantle the engine before it could be loaded on mules to be hauled to the site of the Big Crevice. The powerful engine was mounted on the barge and all hands were anticipating the many pleasures that wealth would bring.

The operation began by driving a large steel casing into the crevice to a depth of 90 feet. It was capped, for use as a bailer to bring the rich silt to the surface. The cables, when tightened, snapped, but not a brow wrinkled. For wasn't this the most powerful steam engine in the West? The cables were spliced and the engine was once more put to the task of raising the casing. The engine puffed and henved and with a roaring blast, it blew to bits and was no more. The casing was raised empty, the castles in the clouds vanished, the gold and crevice remained. The river's mad rush soon erased the man-made scars.

THE NEXT YEAR, when the water was low, a small retaining dam was constructed to divert the river and again mentried to work the Big Crevice. They worked the south bank and into the cave. When the surface gravel was removed the blue silt was found to be much richer than any previous removed. At the depth of 30 feet, with 30 men removing water in a bucket brigade, the man on the bottom managed to scoop up the blue silt. At last, the crevice seemed to be conquered when a large slab of limestone fell, burying five men. The Big Crevice once again had defended Crevice once again had defended her hoard of gold.

Several years later a new company was formed. A steampowered dredge was built, with an endless belt, with attached buckets, to dredge the mud into a sluice box. There the gold was to be recovered. The latest in steam pumps was forged in San Francisco and transported to the site of the dredge. The equipment was placed and the dredge towed to its location over the Big Crevice. Wood was fed to the furnace and fired. As steam pressure was being built up, the company waited with empty bullion sacks ready for the gilttering dust.

THE BIG MOMENT arrived and the buckets turned in their endless path. The pumps functioned, but after several days of operation only the surface gravel had been removed with the golden treasure still far below. The equipment was shattered, broken and bent. The buckets had fallen from the belt, the pump was broken and clogged with river gravel. High water threatened to take the dredge down river. One night a guyline snapped, causing the craft to capsize and ending efforts to recover the golden hoard.

After 1880, history ceased recording events at the Big Crevice. The millions in gold are supposedly still there for the taking. But remember: it takes more than the pick, shovel and gold pan that the Forty-Niners had.

Only Godfrey Ever Had It Like This

After - bath emoting beats tub scene in view of Martha Hyer, caught here in only towel on "My Man Godfrey" set. She does towel-clad scene in the film.

LET ALL those other glamour dolls of the movies squirm with joy over a chance to play a bathtub scene. Martha Hyer says they can't compare with the eye-appeal of after-bath emoting.

In Universal-International's "My Man Godfrey," the brilliant blonde from Fort Worth does an 8-minute scene with David Niven while she's clad only in a bath towel. Her efforts to remain covered in front of the camera will have wishful males breathless in anticipation of something that really can't happen because the censors frown on such things,

"THERE ARE BIG advantages to the towel over the tub," Martha insists. "In the dunking scenes a gal is up to her ears in soap bubbles. In a towel scene she covers what fruitless for decades.

It was not until 1919 that nation-wide suffrage to wom-en was guaranteed by this sentence in the 19th Amend-

"The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex."

Today eligible women voters Today eligible women voters outnumber eligible men voters by 3 million. Thus in a span of 87 years American women have advanced from political obscurity to the point where they hold the balance of power. And this swift ascent began with the birth of a bahy in a shack in Wyoming.

she can and takes advantage of what she can't.

"In a tub she's practically immobilized.

"In a towel she can go and do as she pleases—almost. A tub hides the figure; a towel accentuates it. Believe me, the suds finish a sad second as far as I'm concerned."

FOR SOME TIME Miss Hyer has been campaigning for more provocative roles. Although she has risen to screen stardom in a succession of fine roles in such films as "Battle Hymn" and "Kelly and Me," she has and "Kelly and Me," she has really had no chance to show off what Hollywoodians recognized as one of filmdom's finest forms.

"I'm making up for lost time in 'My Man Godfrey,'" she promises. "That towel can do can do more for me than Dorothy La-mour's sarong did for her."

IN SOME AREAS, a life-guard has a whole mile of beach to watch in winter. "It doesn't make much difference whether there is one person out there, or 40—if the one is in trouble," says Roy J. (Dutch) Miller who learned to swim in the Pacific Ocean off of Pacific Ave., and for 35 years has headed the lifeguards here.

Dutch's first safety sugges-

Don't go into unprotected water by yourself, no matter how good you are. Anything can happen at any time. His second:

Don't take any swimming de-vice (inflated inner tube or the like) into the water if you can't do without it,

This third:.

Don't go into the water if you have been drinking

His fourth:

If you get caught in a current, go along with it. Don't fight it.

His fifth:

If you get into trouble, yell or wave an arm.

BECAUSE OF THE protection of the breakwater, Long Beach's only breakers are from Pine Ave. to Alamitos Ave., and from 58th Pi. to 70th Pl. on the Peninsula, Dutch points out. Persons accustomed to smooth water are likely to get panicky if they hit a little rough water.
Dutch thinks all persons should swim reasonably near a lifeguard station.

CAUGHT IN THE CUR-RENT, a swimmer should go along with the current—it is too strong for him to fight anyway—and then make his way back, believes the lifeguard captain.

"If a person in trouble will float or tread water and yell or raise an arm we'll sure get to him it we can. It's funny, but kids horsing around can yell 'Help!' all day in fun and we don't pay any attention. But the minute anyone yells with terror in his voice it's dif-ferent."

When Langslet, an enterprising young builder, and his wife bought a small Mediterraneantype bungalow at 104 Rivo Alto Canal, they mutually decided something drastic would have to be done about it. The loca-tion was good but the house offered considerably less than ideal living. By the time they finally drew up plans, with the assistance of Poper & Lockett, AIA, the house they had purchased for remodeling had been virtually swallowed up by the twice-as-large, 10-times-as-liv-able new home that was to be built over, in and around the original structure.

From 950 square feet of floor space, the house expanded to include more than 2,000 feet of luxurious living space! In the process, a front porch (a use-less and unattractive preamble less and unattractive preamble to the front door) gave way along with the living room and a bedroom to provide for the present living room—a wonderful, open-to-the-view area of some 18 by 23 feet.

TAKING A CUE from the location—where azure waters of the canal glint past the front windows -- the decorator borrowed the interior color scheme, evolving a tasteful "sand and sea" color blend, Throughout the house, the colors relate directly to, or are divisible by, muted tones of sand-heige and turquoise. These factors figured in choosing the living room car-pet, a vibrant wool tweed in rich turquoise with green and charcoal flecks. The walls are that coal freews. The walls are the turquoise, the coiling off-white. Draperles for the canalview windows are open-mesh, sand-colored fabric that blends beautifully with the rock of the fireplace, a tasteful and textural blend of three kinds of stone.

The fireplace has an extended raised hearth flanked on the left by a handsome built-in unit that contains the Langslets' hifi components and displays, above counter level, books and a collection of Mexican figurines in terra cotta and stone. (This area occupies the space once taken up by the front once matically combines tones of green, turquoise, beige and rust . . . neatly and concisely tying in all the colors in an effective union,

The dining area is set in an "L" from the living room. Here stands a very compact folding contemporary dining table which, when not in use, stays under the window, agreeably out of the way. But, when needed, the table unfolds to seat a crowd comfortably. Family dining, however, is an affair which is carried out at a divider counter between the dining room and the kitchen. The counter, topped in pure white plastic, is table-high, thus eliminating the necessity for longlegged bar stools. Web back and seat chairs line up on either side of the counter, makeither side of the counter, making this a perfectly accessible, comfortable and agreeable spot to lunch. Suspended over the counter is a roll-up basswood shade in sandy-driftwood, an innovation that is always ready for lowering whenever greater. for lowering whenever greater privacy between living area and kitchen is desired.

sunny note of color in combination with counter tops of plain turquoise plastic. The floor is sand - and - turquoiseflecked vinyl. A second basswood screen has been installed over the kitchen sink at the window that overlooks an inclosed, sheltered spot which the Langslets are furnishing to function as a handy and hospitable out-door patio-kitchen.

Off the living area downstairs is a hallway heading to the room that offers its services as a play room for the Langslet youngsters. Also off the hallway is the guest bath.

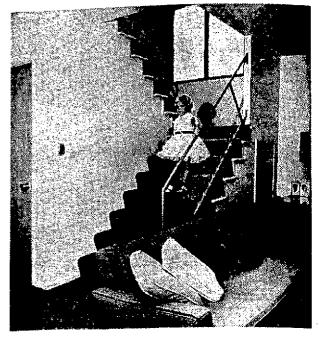

Upstairs (a complete new addition) are three bedrooms, a spacious laundry - and - sewing room, and a master bath.

THE MASTER bedroom faces the front, thereby taking in a gull's-eye view of the picturesque canal. Deep-piled, lush carpeting is blush pink to match the walls. In a dressing area, recessed and installed with wardrobes and built-ins, cabinets are painted a delicate tur-quoise. A turquoise heirloom spread is accented with tiny pillows in pink, turquoise and white. Ice-pink boucle curtains dress the corner windows. A glass door, similarly draped, opens to a roofed open deck. a charming spot to take the Sunday paper and a cup of colfee on a sunny morning.

The cheery laundry room, featuring the latest in electrical appliances, is carried out in coral, yellow and turquoise.

Finally, 3-year-old Julie Ann's room is ice cream-pink and white. Six-year-old brother Craig has an "all-boy" room carried out in sandalwood, turquoise and white.

Playground of the Kings

YOU CAN HAVE a "royal" vacation—Polynesian style, that is-in Hawaii where there are mementos of the Hawaiian monarchy on every hand.

There in the capital city on the island of Oahu, you can visit Iolani (Bird of Heaven) Palace, once the home of the Hawiian monarch and today the only royal palace on U.S. soil, The restored throne room where King Kalakana, (1874-1891) and his sister, Queen Li-liuokalani, (1891-83), once ruled is open to visitors except when the Territorial Legislature is in session.

Up Nuuanu Valley along the main avenue to the Windward side of the island are the royal mausoleum, the former resi-dence of Queen Emma, and at the sheer precipice called the Pali, the cliffs over which the army of King Kamehameha the Great, (1795-1819), pushed the warriors of Oahu to conquer the island. The lookout is known today for its panoramic view of the Windward coast.

ON THE "BIG ISLAND" of Hawaii an hour's flying time from Honolulu, the tropical Kona coast once was the play-ground of Hawaiian kings. ground of Hawaiian kings. Here, Kamehameha I gained prowess as a warrior, and here at Kaelakekua Bay is the spot where Captain James Cook met his end in a skirmish with the Hawaiians. There are ancient heinus (Hawalian temples) where kings once worshiped, the City of Refuge, huge lavawalled enclosure that was a place of sanctuary to the ancient cient Hawaiians, and the remains of an old royal road.

Across Hawaii island in the city of Hilo is the Naha stone, a giant block of lava, which young Kamchameha once lifted to prove his right to rule.

On Maui, the "valley isle," which lies between Oahu and Hawaii, are other numerous reminders of the Hawaiian kingdom, which was in effect from 1795 until 1893. The picturesque little village of Lahaina once was capital of the kingdom and former rulers are buried in the village cemetery.

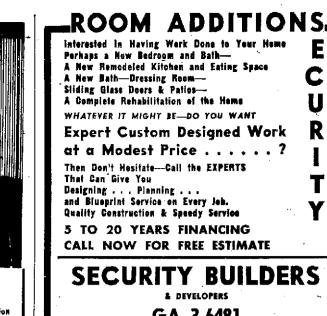

HALF-HOUR BY AIR to the north of Honolulu is Kauai, also coupled with royal history. One of the two major resort hotels on the island is the site of the former residence of Queen Deborah Kapule. In this Wailua river region the first Tahitians to come to Hawaii are believed to have landed. Any child of royal blood on the island had to be born here to be recognized as a true high chief. Seven sacred temples were lo-cated along the river.

All of these sites on all islands are easily accessible to visitors touring the major islands of the Hawaiian chain. Mani and Kanai are a half-hour Hawaiian chain. flight from Honolulu by frequent inter-island air service. Hawaii is one hour away.

A ROYAL TOUR of Hawaii can be combined with beach sports, Polynesian and Oriental entertainment and shopping tours, the big feasts called luaus and the fishing festivals called hukilaus for a full itineracy.

One thing to remember: for all its royal heritage, Hawaii today is a modern American today is a modern American community, with all the conveniences of home. The American flag is flown proudly over this U. S. Territory that hopes soon to become a state.

Mr. and Mrs. Woods, who ad been rock hounds for a dozen years, became fossil fans five years ago when they began picking up ammonites (pre-historic shellfish related to the present day chambered nau-tilus) in the Lake Lehannon region in Nevada. There are 100 different known species of ammonites, and the Woods have 12.

They have picked up many of their fossils; others were given to them; they traded for the rest.

A Black Hills friend long had used a petrified turtle for a doorstop, and knowing Woods' interest, gave it to him.

A LENGTHY LIST would be needed to catalog all of the collector's items assembled by Mr and Mrs. Wood. One of the curious bits is a gizzard stone from a dimesaur, 25-ton fellow of the Age of Reptiles, 60 to 200 million years ago.

Another is a faw tooth of an elephant of the Pleistocene Age; still another is the fossilriged knuckle bone of an elephant, a stone of cutting quality. The tooth is from Ohio; the knuckle bone from Nipomo in Northern California,

They Put Plato to Modern Use

By Aubrey B. Haines

THROUGHOUT the Southland nowadays-from Indio to Avalon and from San Diego to Van Nuys—persons of many professions gather two nights a month and for two hours at a time discuss the Great Books of the Western World. What is more, they love doing it.

The aim of Great Books since its inception in 1945 has been to convert a college course in liberal arts into a nationwide community project. No a ca-demic requirements are necessary for participation. There are no lectures, professional lecturers, or fees. There are no fixed opinions which Great Rocks scale that it is a second opinion. Books seeks to inculcate, r (Continued on Page 26.)

They're Putting Plato to Modern Use

does it impose any rigid study guides. About the only inflexible condition is that the discussion group avoid the appearance and habits of a classroom.

A GLANCE AT courses for the first six years reveals such diversified authors as Plato, Machiavelli, Montaigne, Shakespeare, Euclid, Thoreau, Hume, Mill, Einstein, Descartes and Stendahl. People come from many walks of life to participate in reading and discussion. Housewives sit among businessmen, cabinetmakers, secre-taries, engineers, draftsmen, men, cannet makers, section tarles, engineers, draftsmen, lawyers, doctors, teachers and ministers. Though there are many levels of understanding many levels of understanding in any group, education is open to everyone who reads painstakingly and discusses the book at hand with an open mind.

Here is a typical group. From 10 to 40 persons are gathered at tables which allow everyone at tables which allow everyone to see everybody else. The room may be in a library, a school, a church, or a community hall. The group is discussing a selection from "The Republic" of Plato. A leader asks, "Mr. Schmelling, what would you do if you had the ring of Gyges?"

"You many the invisible ring."

"You mean the invisible ring

that Plato talks about?" Mr. Schmelling inquires.

A secretary, Grace Malderone, interrupts, "Not the invisible ring — the ring that makes you invisible. You could get away with anything."

"Would you rob a bank?" a co-leader inquires of Schmel-

"Of course not!" the man replies. "It wouldn't be honest."

Julius Mossuto, a teacher, asks, "What if someone stole your money from you in the first place?"

NOW FOUR members of the group raise their hands. Wish-ing to speak all at once, they sometimes do. The aim of Great Books groups is to make its members better citizens and better persons. The power to think is exclusively human. Authors separated by centuries and continents deal with the same basic questions, for the nature of man and the universe does not change.

During World War I the late John Erskine drew up for in-fantrymen the first list of great books while in charge of an American study center at Dijon, France. Returning to his post at Columbia University in New York, he persuaded the faculty to establish a two-year course in which selected upper-classmen would read and dis-

Then he joined the faculty of the Uni-versity of Chicago, where the Great Books Foundation orig-inated with the help of Robert Maynard Hutchins, then uni-versity chancellor. versity chancellor.

TODAY ALL OVER America people gather to discuss these books. Not only do the most intelligent people appreciate and profit by the courses. Nineteen hundred years ago Quin-tillian wrote: "You will find tillian wrote: You will find that most people are quick to reason and ready to learn. Reason comes as naturally to man as flying to birds. Those who are dull and unteachable are as abnormal as prodigious births and monstrosities and are but few in number." So today men use the Great Books as powerful lenses by which they evaluate past, present, and

Poker Etiquette and Woomanship

"HER BEDSIDE COMPAN-ION" edited by Margery Dar-rell Lobsenz, and "HIS BED-SIDE COMPANION" edited by Norman M. Lobsenz (Prentice-Hall, $3.95 each): Many of the world's finest writers contribute to these highly amusing an-thologies devoted mainly to foibles and nonsense of the opposite sex in fashion, essays, poetry and cartoons—gathered not only from the usual sources not only from the usual sources but also from radio broadcasts, magazine articles and even his-torical reports. "His Bedside Companion" is as masculine as a man could wish for, its con-tents ranging from an exciting blow-by-blow account of the Battle of Midway to polecr etiquette and some sound advice on woomanship. Its female on woomaning. Her Bedside Com-panion" is, by the same token, extremely feminine, containing such subjects, as a dissertation on beds and bedrooms, advice on choosing a husband, and at-taining fashion smartness. Here is prime bait for readers-in-bed who like to be caught laughing.

, "AMERICA, WITH LOVE," by Kathleen Winsor (Putnam's, by Kathleen Winsor (Putnam's, $4): This is a slice of America of depression days, seen through the eyes of 12-year-old Cassy Spangler, who wants to look like Jean Harlow, and thinks that Russ, a neighbor, is more handsome than Ronald Coleman especially when Russ lets her ride his bicycle. It is a book, too, of straining budgets, of backyard jokes, of people whose lives are considerably different than they seem. Persons who grew up in the depression will find much of the material

"THE INCIDENT" by Marc Rivette, (World, $4.50): Men and the sea, danger in a lurking submarine, hunger, thirst, raw sun and salt lashings make this one of the dramatic novels of the new season. It also is a promising first novel of a writer better known for his drama ar-ticles and book reviews in the San Francisco Chroniele, Drawing on his memory of service with the Merchant Marine in World War II and in the Korean Conflict, Rivette writes about a freighter torpedoed without warning, and how the 16 survivors work out their individual

"READING FOR PLEAS-"READING FOR PLEAS-URE," chosen, with introduc-tion and comment, by Bennett Cerf (Harper, $4.95): Here for you to gorge on, served up by Cerf with a welcome generos-ity, are 750 big pages, 60 writ-ers and 60 selections: Short stories, nonfiction, bits from novels, pieces from magazines and newspapers, even adveritsand newspapers, even adveritsing copy. The names range from Wolfe to Mansfield, Carson, Faulkner, Wharton, Beerbohm, Buchwald, Burk and some not so familiar. Every reader might not go for some of the selec-tions with the promised pleasure, but none should miss Cerf's biographical notes, where Cerf is Cerf.

"DR. SCHINDLER'S WOM-AN'S GUIDE TO BETTER LIVING 52 WEEKS A YEAR" by John A. BOAT TALK

Boat Around a Corner

By Bob Ruskauff

HOSE Englishmen have been trying to build a boat that would go fast around a corner for years," commented Ted Jones.

"They build wonderful engines and you've got to admire the courage of that fellow Don Campbell and others. Why they don't come up with a good competition boat is beyond me."

The comments bear attention inasmuch as tall, personable Ted Jones of Scattle is, if not the greatest, certainly among the greatest designers of fast racing hulls today.

THOSE FROM IIIS boards include the elite of the unlimited hydroplanes. Some are already in the limbo because of accidents on the rooster-tail roads—such as the fabulous Slo Mo Shun IV (which alone started the west on its way to domi-nation of the motorboat racing world), Miss Thriftway and Shanty I.

Others are on top of the pack now—Hawaii Kai III, Thrift-way Too and Miss Wahoo, Like many other Americans those business or hobby is going fast over water, T. Jones feels there'd be tremendous impetus if England would come up with a piston-engine hydroplane that would lick the pants off, say, one of the Jones-designed creations.

CANADA TRIED a year or so ago but couldn't quite cut the mustard with Miss Supertest, which challenged for the Harmsworth trophy at Detroit. The coveted International tro-phy (posted in 1903 by Lord Alfred Harmsworth, British Alfred Harmsworth, British publisher) was won in 1956 by the late Shanty I, under the hand of Col. Russell Schlech, who is now stationed at March Field.

There are, of course, two viewpoints to consider and Enghand's one great water speed champion today leans to the belief that the piston engines have about had it.

Nor can you deny the logic of Donald Malcolm Campbell, the first successful exponent of high smeal solutions.

Two years ago she did 216.25 m.p.h. on Nevada's Lake Mead. Later, in England, she moved the record to 225.63 on Lake Coniston.

However, the Bluebird just can't go out there and rip it up on any old water. Since late June, Donald and his crew had been sojourning in and about New York state, waiting for the ideal conditions that would enable Bluebird to up her record.

It's hard to believe the weather in New York can be that lousy for three solid months, but two weeks ago Campbell and Bluebird sailed for home on the liner United for home on the liner United States, holding his same old record. In repeated efforts Bluebird never approached the

By Bob Gilmore

SPLENDID GROWING conditions in the Long Beach area are as favorable to bugs as to the plants they feed on. Millions of dollars are spent every year in an effort to decrease the bug population; yet, garden pests multiply with a vengeance. One way to solve this problem is to plant ornamentals that are not too tasty to the bugs.

One of the best foundation plants is abelia grandiflora. This subject may be set in either full sun or part shade. The leaves are shiny but quite small and possessed of a delightful bronzygreen color. Clusters of fragrant, pinkish-white florets appear during a large part of the year. The abelia is hardy down to zero and not at all appealing

THE ESCALLONIA is another plendid choice in this area for gardens subject to pest infestation, This plant is a natural for gardens situated along the coastal region. It seems to delight in the sea air. Two varieties are available: one with red flowers and the other with pink

Japanese boxwood is another favorite for gardeners in this region. It has attained its greatest fame when used as a hedge. The plant may be kept trimmed to a height of about from two to three feet as it reacts favor-ably to fairly regular pruning. Japanese boxwood is quite hardy and very unpalatable to the bug population in your gar-den. It is hardy down to about

Palms and fatshedra are relatively free from pest infestation, but are still decorative in the landscape, domestica, better known as the heavenly bamboo. This is actu-ally a dual purpose plant for it may be used in the garden as a hedge or in pots for specimen purposes. It is most attractive during the winter season when the entire plant turns a beautiful coppery-red.

RHUS OVATA, a California native, takes heat and drought in stride. It is not bothered the cold. It is often called the "sugar bush," a misleading name as the sugary coating tastes sour due to the sour berries. This plant wants lots of sun but thrives in almost any

Other ornamentals that are not too palatable to most bugs include geranium, plumbago, polygala, veronica, vinca, scabi-osa, iceplant, îris, jasmine, bachelor button, carissa grandiflora, alyssum, gazania, calendula, cedars, coreopsis, linum, gaillardia and arborvitaes.

Dwarf Citrus Has Its Points

VISITORS from the East are impressed when they can go out in their hosts' back in sunny Southern California and pluck a ripe orange or lemon. Even the host enjoys growing some citrus of his own.

Nowadays, what with smaller homes and lots, it isn't always practical to grow large size eltrus trees. Yet space limitacitrus trees. Yet space limita-tion shouldn't deter you from growing citrus in your own back yard! Now, you can grow dwarf citrus, whether it is orange, lemon, lime, tangerine, kumquat, limequat, grapefruit, and other varieties of citrus and other varieties of citrus. These trees with true dwarf understock roots grow from around 4 to 8 feet tall, and spread. Of course, those grown in containers are more easily kept to a smaller size.

WHEN YOU GO to your local nurseryman to buy a dwarf citrus, be sure to specify you want citrus that is budded to a true dwarf citrus use. It produces a small tree bearing crops of fruit up to 90 per cent of the commonly grown large tree from citrus. Also, this un-derstock imparts a superior quality of fruit in several types of citrus that are budded to Some growers have found it has a few degrees more resistance to cold. They've become exceedingly popular as container-grown specimen plants because they seem to be resistant to excess water. That doesn't mean the soil may be soggy wet all time!

natio or on the porch, or where they may receive from full to a half-day of sunlight. The flowers furnish welcome fragrance addi-tion to the garden. The fruit decorative purpose as well as food.

ABOUT AN INCH layer of pea-size gravel over the brok-en crocks that cover the drainage holes in container, helps provide better drainage. Plants in clay pots need more watering during the hot weather than do plants in wooden lubs. Plants in wooden tubs may not need watering for a week or longer. Plants in Hydrocel tubs are watered less frequently than clay pot plants, but a bit often-er than plants in wooden tubs.

Soil mixture for citrus,, whether in container or in the ground, should be about onethird peat moss and two-thirds average type soil. Extremely sandy soil mixture may be up to one-half peat moss and onehalf sandy soil.

WASHINGTON NAVELS and valencia oranges are the most popular of the citrus in dwarf form. Ettreka and Meyer lemons are desirable. Bearss lime fur-nishes gold crops of fruit for decoration and beverage use Even though grapefruit seems to be a little finicky about sweet flavor in the fruit locally, the dark foliage and colorful fruit adds to landscaping.

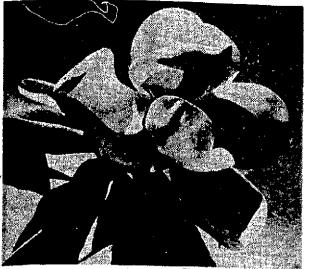

Of all the dwarf citrus, Kara

"House clean" your garden first. Pull up and get rid of dead plants, prunings and clip-pings, as well as other forms of debris. Then spray the gar-den (including the soil) with a good oil emulsion. If you use an oil emulsion containing line sulphur, you have both a fungicide and an insecticide. This combination used on your fruit trees, helps to prevent fungus diseases like peach leaf curl. Used on berry bushes, it destroys red spiders and mites, breaking down the fertility of the eggs, as well as killing the "crawlers." In short, it prevents diseases and infestations from over-wintering in your garden.

dwarf, as with the large tree, is its fragrant, cup-shaped, white flowers which bloom intermittently throughout the year. The tree itself has many year. The tree itself has many attractions for home gardeners, according to the California Association of Nurserymen. Its shape is erect, compact and very symmetrical and its handsome foliage is dark-green glossy on top and rusty under-neath.

DWARF MAGNOLIAS, although a recent development, are sure to find quick favor with California gardeners because they are handsome and provide deep shade in small gardens or an exceptionally fine espalier against sunny or shady walls.

The magnolia grows well throughout the state, but best of all in warm, humid areas. It will withstand some exposure to winds. This sun-loving ever-green grows best in moist, heavy, well-drained soil and can tolerate some acidity.

This dwarf magnolia is an excellent shade tree which can be planted with great success on lawns, by streets or in tubs. Its roots are both deep and shallow feeding, so planting around the roots should be restricted, to light feeding plants. For example, it would be unwise to surround this magnolia with azaleas or rhododendrops.

THE MAGNOLIA is best pruned after flowering, and then lightly. Although the tree is extremely hardy, the magnolia wounds sometimes bleed or become infected. Your local nurseryman will recommend a good tree paint to protect the wounds.

Southern California gardeners wishing to add the beauty of a magnolia to their garden should also consider the previously mentioned Magnolia exoniensis along with the Magnolia St.

THIS IS A 27-MILE route but travelers to or from Palm Springs and other desert cities need travel only an extra seven miles to reach the agricultural valleys and mile-high apple country, since 20 miles would be traveled on the regular speedway route.

The spectacular tourist trade at the orchards began a little more than 30 years ago with Beaumont cherries.

Eight years ago Bogart turned his attention to the flavorful Oak Glen apples. Within a few seasons, tourists began going to the mountain area in 70,000 cars from September to January, stopping at the roadside salesmoms which are open every day.

MANY ORCHARDS maintain large free picnic grounds, under towering live oaks and pines. Yucaipa and Beaumont have fine city parks.

An added advantage: You can put them on European buses and trains to get across hilly country or long hops.

Seems like everybody in Europe rides bieycles. But you have to have sturdy legs to pedal around. (A haif hour did for me.)

You might look into the putput bleycles that have the little gasoline motor attachment. And scooters looked to me like the best and easiest cheap transport. They fix them up with back seats, sidecars and all sorts of attachments for the extra rider.

"... some place warm to spend the winter! Maybe Madrid, Spain?"

NOT MADRID THEN. Madrid can be as cold as a pawn broker's eye. It will be warmer down around Malaga on the Mediterranean coast. That's nice country — olive groves and big, gray ruined watch towers.

Or you might try Portugal. Lisbon high températures are only in the midfifties. But from there you can head south and pick up one of the government-run pousadas. Get the locations from the Tourist Bureau in Lisbon.

This is nice untouched country. A lot of it has walled towns and castles just like the Moors left it over a thousand years ago. Portuguese food is good and their wines are better than Spain.

The pousadas are inexpensive and are very comfortable. There's not much Englishspeaking help. But you can get by with a phrase book. The language is not hard to pick up.

Shoot the action in your home movies and you've really got something worth while.

CAMERA ANGLES

By Bob Knight

CONTINUITY is the real difference between home movies and snapshots. . . be-tween what you can do with the latter, and should do with the former. With a snapshot camera you arrest . . . freeze . . . isolated glimpses of subjects or of events. Such as of a youngster, halted at play. Or of a favorite vista, singled out of an entire mountain range, of an entire mountain range. Or of the straining finish of a closely contested footrace. In short—highlights. But with a movie camera you can tell the full story, in which a highlight becomes a climax.

To make our point, let's say you want a snapshot of dad, out in the driveway, washing the new car—and heaven knows dad gets into all too few family pictures. If yours is a very simple snapshot camera, which ple snapshot camera, which won't stop action, you ask dad to — "Hold it!" — and you squeeze off a shot of him, foaming sponge in hand, beaming at your lens. If your snapshot camera can halt action, you just click it whenever fancy strikes.

WITH A MOVIE camera, however, you don't want to get a glimpse—you want to tell a story. You don't want to stop action—you want to record it. So, in a brief series of long shots and short—"long" and "short" in terms of both cam-era distance and scene duration you really show dad washing

The whole trick is to shoot it as you'd say it — and the chances are you'd say it just about like this: "Bill's really proud of that new car of ours. Scrubs it, stem to stern, every clear weekend. First he drives it out of the garage and parks it in a patch of shade under an tree about halfway down the drive. Then he scrunches down with hose and bucket and brews up a brimming pail of sudsy water. Then the sponge, and a pawfull of feam. Car top ... windshield ... hood ...

wherever some suicidal bug wherever some suicidal kamakazied the paint job kamakazied the paint job... hosing off every last bubble before he pats it dry with his chamois. And then the chrome! He fusses over it like our fifteen-year-old primping for a prom. I always try to have a tall, cool glass ready for him when he finally backs away to admire his bradinark with admire his handiwork, with canary feathers all but showing at either end of a prideful grin."

LIKE THAT. Just the way you'd describe it — with sentences, phrases, or merely words, translated into movie shots. Some made from well back . . . some, almost within shock . . some, almost within inches. Some 10 seconds long, some 6 or 7. Some but 3 or 4 seconds. A picture story in color, and in action. A moving picture, as only a movie cam-era can tell it. Any movie cam-

It works for any subject, big or little. All, if you let them, write their own continuity. All you have to do is film the story as it unfolds.

In movies, continuity is everything! For, although your movie camera takes but one shot at a time, your movie projector, inevitably, shows them consecutivelying fact that implies that they will all be part of a story.

A Week for Cats

By Eleanor Avery Price

WALT WHITMAN wrote in "Song of Myself":

"I think I could turn and live with animals,

They are so placed and self-contain'd,

I stand and look at them long and long."

Whitman was including all animals, but the words seem to apply especially well to cats, whose "Week" starts on Nov. 1, stressing for the 13th consecutive year appreciation, understanding, and better care of

One of the greatest gifts the cat gives his owner is his calm approach to life. If we look at him "long and long," we can him "long and long," we can feel a peaceful sense of relaxation. Some men have even been known to take along the family cat when going fishing because it's the cat's nature to stretch out nearby and purr contentedly and because of the fun a cat can have over such elemental things as leaves, bugs in tree hollows, or worms used for fishing.

CATS, OF COURSE, serve in other ways than helping their owners find an oasis of peace amid pressing troubles. For instance, the American Ferinstance, the American Ferinsta line Society in a survey indi-cated that where cats had been nearly exterminated in sections of New York, the prevalence of diseases rose because of rats. In fact, if if were not for the common street cat, the rat and mouse population of cities might have become equal to that of Hamelin town before the advent of the legendary Pied Piper. Except for the cat, you might not be alive today. Think this over the next time you are tempted to chase the neighbor's cat out of your yard. At least usher him out with a mild "shoo" and not with the

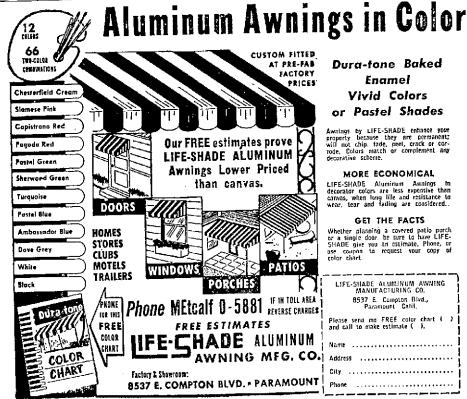

If you will visit a guide dog school such as those at San Rafael and Beaumont, you will learn that cats and kittens of all types and colors are serving at these training schools to accustom the dogs to fit into their life work as eyes for their new owners. Dog are permitted to see the cats but re-strained from chasing them. Perhaps you or a loved one may someday need this priceless gift that cats are helping make pos-

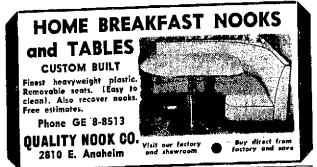

PURRING PLAYFULLY kittens also provide a great measure of comfort to blind persons attending the schools in preparation for "graduation

The life of a child, too, can be greatly enriched by the com-panionship a cat can offer, depending, of course, on the child being taught the fundamentals of cat care. Children should learn to handle cats gently, to brush them carefully, to feed and water them, and to respect their need for privacy while eating.

Cats also serve humanity in laboratories for physiologic and chemotheropeutic tests. Medical investigators are so interested in the cat that this arrival is also the subject for nor mal is also the subject for parapsychologists in such places as Duke University under Rockefeller Foundation grants.

Caricature by Milt Report MR., MRS. GOODWIN

The Atmosphere Is Colonial

NO WONDER Leonard and Belle Goodwin wear such bright smiles as they go about their multiple duties at their large, colonial-style restaurant at 8567 Artesia Blvd., Bellflower.

Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin have every right to be cheerful because they've made the pleasant discovery that their hundreds and hundreds of friends and customers keep coming back week after week, year after year for more of that wonderful Goodwin's cooking and home-like atmosphere.

The customers always take a personal interest in what Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin are doing. For example, in recent weeks scads of patrons have asked: When are you going to start serving luncheons again?" So naturally the Goodwins replied: "Your wish is our command!" As a result luncheons are now served Wednesdays through Fridays from 11:30 a.m. to 2

SUPERB DINNERS are featured Sundays from noon to 8 p.m. and from 5 to 8:30 p.m. the rest of the week. (The restaurant is closed Mondays and Tuesdays.) These are large, complete dinners served in deep comfortable booths in a huge dining room which is light, airy and immaculate. Among the entrees are these for $2: chicken fried steak, breaded veal cutlet, Dutch-oven pot roast and fried Louisiana jumbo shrimp. Fried chicken is $2.25 and the Goudwin's famed New York steak and eastern prime rib au jus are $2.85 each. All dinners include soup and salad, with choice of dressing, baked potatoes with cheese sauce and green onlons, a second vegeta-ble, homemade rolls, choice of beverage, and choice of numerous fancy desserts including sensational icebox pie.

Goodwin's has a large ban-quet room for groups up to 200 and accommodates smaller parties in the Green Room. Winifred Trickey plays trickily on the organ on weekends.

Would Your Husband Marry You Today?

...OR HAVE YOU GROWN TOO OLD TOO FAST?

PUT yourself in your husband's place
... then ask yourself: would YOU marry a woman who had too soon lost the pen, vitality and vigor she had? Would YOU want to live with a tired, and maybe even nervous person who falt and acted far older than her actual age? Be honest and tell yourself what YOU would think of a woman who simply let her youthful energy needlessly slip away—a person about whom people were beginning to talk behind her back.

Well, if you have been feeling extra tired lately . . . if you find life a chore instead of a joy, perhaps science has the answer for your problem. It may well be, that just like thousands of people all over the country, your condition is merely the result of a common and easily corrected nutritional deficiency in your diet!

Yes, you may actually be "well-fed but poorly nourished" simply hecause your daily diet lacks certain essential vitamins, minerals and lipotropic factors. You owe it to yourself and your husband to find out whether a safe, proven food supplement such as Vitasafe High-Potency Capsules can restore the pep and energy you used to enjoy. Take advantage of the marvelous free offer described below and see for yourself whether Vitasafe high-potency capsules can help you regain at least some of your youthful pep and energy

WHERE DID THE RED TAPE GO?

That's what thousands of car owners wonder when Allstate pays their auto insurance claims so fast...often right "on the spot."

One of the remarkable things about Alistate is the way we cut red tape to save you both time and money.

Claims are paid fast. We give our claims experts the authority to write claim checks "on the spot" in many cases. When you have a claim with Allstate, you don't find yourself tangled up in home office red tane.

Policies that are easier to understand. Allatate policies are as clear as they can be. Written in the plainest possible language . . . printed in large type . . . illustrated to help make everything clear. You know exactly what you're buying. No red tape when you buy. You can buy an Albiate auto insurance policy the convenient, lowpressure way-over the counter at a Sears store ... at an Allstate Insurance Center...or in your own home, if you prefer. Look up "Allstate" in your phone book and ask an Agent to call,

Cutting red tape cuts your cost too. Allstate was founded by Sears, on the same big-volume, low-overhead, quality-for-less principle that made Sears famous for hetter values. This modern way of selling

insurance lowers our costs...and you benefit by getting lower rates. Compared with the rates most other companies charge, savings of 22% are common, and some folks save as much as 38%.

You may save $25 or more a year, simply by switching to Alistate.

"Allstate-may we help you?" These are the very first words you hear whenever you call us. And they are more than just a friendly greeting. They tell you how Allstate feels about its customers all the time...not just when we sell you a policy. Be wise. Check Allstate value.

A penny, a nickel, a dime

by GLENN FORD

I always carry three very special coins in my pocket: a penny, a nickel and a dime. And I'll never spend them because they're constant reminders of the most important lesson I ever learned.

Like the average family in the depression days of the early 1930s, mine didn't have much money, especially while I was growing up in Santa Monica, Calif. Still, I don't recall wanting for the many things a young boy seems to need — model ships, kites, tops, candy and the like.

Whenever there was something I really wanted, I could rely on my grandmother. She seemed to be a never-ending source of money. Even when I didn't ask, she was there to give me a nickel, a dime, even a quarter to buy some imagined necessity of life. I was grateful, but after a hasty thank you, I'd be off thinking of my own satisfaction.

I was II when my grandmother died. Except for three coins in her purse, she left nothing. The coins were a penny, a nickel and a dime. For the first time in my life, I realized something: I had been too engrossed in my own wants, my own growing up, to think of someone else, someone I deeply and sincerely loved. My grandmother never bought anything for herself. She had scrimped and saved pennies so that I might have some fun. I had taken her devotion for granted.

Since then those three coins have made me see that so many of us treat those we love with less respect and consideration than we sometimes accord absolute strangers. We rationalize that a brother "will understand," that a wife "should realize," that a mother "knows." The result is that we're often indifferent to the feelings of those who are closest to us. We blame this on such things as lack of time, business pressure — or mere forgetfulness.

I have no such excuse. I still carry with me three reminders of the importance of respect, consideration and kindness: the penny, the nickel and the dime my grandmother left behind.

On Parade

Not long ago the entire free world took a sharp, quick breath when Russia announced it had successfully fired a missle with a global range—thousands of miles. What did this mean to America? Have we fallen behind in today's most deadly international race?

Today, on pp. 8-10, Washington correspondent Jack Anderson gives you the answers. Anderson and his bureau partner Fred Blumenthal long have kept PARADE readers up to the minute on missile development; this year alone they have produced four other exclusive articles from top military sources. You'll find Anderson's latest report informative, as always—and reassuring.

Four holidays are just around the corner — Halloween, Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Years. Holidays mean food — so today Food Editor Beth Merriman comes up with six brand-new holiday desserts (pp. 24-26), "The ingredients aren't novel," Beth tells us, "but the way you put them together is."

Beth's food page, by the way, is one of our most popular features. Many readers clip them for future use. Should they lose a recipe, Beth hears from them eventually. Recently two letters came in the same mail. One from Mrs. Rex Thordarson of Melrose Park, Ill., asked for the recipe for Irish Soda Raisin Bread "you published about two years ago." The other, from Sandy McEachern of Fontana, Calif., sought a recipe for Casserole Bread that appeared before the 1956 Christmas holidays.

They're on the way, ladies, And frankly, we're delighted at this reassurance that there still are plenty of home bakers around.

First Real Advance in The Treatment of Colds Since Aspirin

Now there is available a new medication which can effectively relieve all of the multiple miseries of even coughing colds and virus colds. It is Citroid Compound, made with a new ingredient that works directly through the bloodstream to help stop the strength-sapping cough of colds. This new ingredient is combined with six other prescription-type ingredients to make Citroid Compound one medicine especially formulated to relieve all important colds' distress!

COUSTING COLDS. Citroid Compound hrings you a new direct kind of action that relieves cough and throat tickle quickly and safelywithout risky narcotics.

CHEST COLOS. Muscular chest congestion, body aches and sore throat caused by chest colds re-spond quickly to Citroid's tested

HEAD COLDS. In minutes Citroid goes to work directly in your blood-stream to open clogged masal pas-sages and stuffy head . . . and let you breathe easily again.

EVEN EFFECTS OF VIRUS COLDS are quickly relieved. Fatigue, feyer, headache begin to fade away in minutes . . . lets you relax and rest, get the sleep your system needs to light off dangerous after-effects.

THESE ARE THE FACTS . . . In clinical studies, the effectiveness and safety of this new medication were demonstrated by medical research scientists working among adults in a giant aircraft factory and children in two mid-western orphanages. Citroid Compound brought results so remarkable that patients reported dramatic relief, often in as little as two hours. This rapid action is attributed to the fact that Citroid works internally through the bloodstream, to attack the effects of even virus colds at any stage.

Citroid Compound contains no codeine, chloroform, or narcotics. It may safely be used as directed for the entire family, including young children.

Citroid Compound brings you a modern combination of tested ingredients . . . with the first real advance for the medication of colds since aspirin was first prescribed in 1899.

It's Halloween

by T. J. McINERNEY

Trying to break the will of an eccentric relative, a Boston woman said she didn't mind being left the ancestral home but did object to one provision: In order to inherit the place, she had to live in it, "That house," she said, "has a reputation for being haunted."

After a Philadelphia apartment was vacated, the landlord showed it to prospects and promptly scared the daylights out of them as well as himself. In a closet dangled two skeletons. Later the former tenant, a medical student, returned and apologetically claimed his forgotten "property."

A woman in Tampa, Fla., sued for divorce. Grounds: Her husband not only read whodunits and ghost stories in bed at night, but woke her up "at all hours" to tell her the horrible details.

In Mattituck, N.Y., an 18-year-old student helping dig the foundation for a new church uncarthed a tombstone. He gasped when he saw it bore his own name - middle initial and all -- plus the date "1911." No one in his family except himself had ever borne that name.

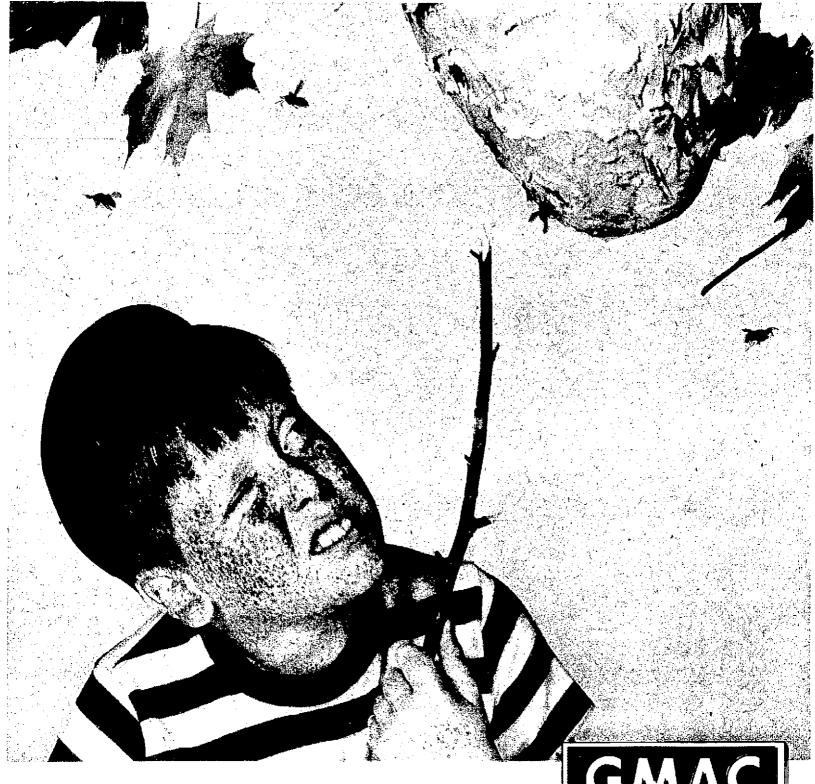

A ghostly hot-rodder may have been operating in Rochester, N.Y., recently. A motorist who had parked his car at the curb one evening found it the next morning on his front porch.

Arrested as a "peeping Tom," a man in Cleveland, Ohio, denied the charge. His explanation: He'd heard there was a "haunted house" in the area and was trying to "verify or disprove the rumor as a public service."

As the aftermath of a party in a New York City suburb, a man and wife sued the host for damages. They alleged they hadn't been told the affair was to be a masquerade party. When the host answered the door dressed as a ghost, the wife "suffered severe shock."

The great guided-missile race

by JACK ANDERSON Parade Washington correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C. Late last August, a terse announcement crackled over Badio Moscow: "An over-continental ballistic missile has been tested. The results show it is possible to deliver a nuclear warhead anywhere in the world."

Does this mean Russia has won the long-distance missile tace and now can bombard America with atomic missiles? Or was the boast only hot air, an ingredient frequently found in Soviet propaganda?

To get the answers, PARADE talked to the men able to evaluate the Soviet announcement: technologists who watch East-West scientific standings the way sports fans follow the football results, intelligence experts who track Russia's missiles with every modern means of surveillance. They helped PARADE prepare the exclusive map on the opposite page, showing the missiles' potential global background. (See below.)

Rest easy on one score: Radio Moscow did not catch the experts by surprise. They had been expecting the announcement for three months——just as they anticipated the later word of the Soviet space satellite. Work on satellite and missile was closely correlated; in fact, an ICBM probably was used to hurl the artificial moon into space.

But how did Russia, which lagged years behind us in developing the atomic bomb, catch up and perhaps pass us in the missile race? The answer lies in the fact that in 15 years Russia's industrial output has jumped 200 per cent while her population has increased only 5 per cent — and this is nowhere more evident than in the missile field.

After World War II, the Soviet Union took over most of the German rocket industry, which had been producing V-1 buzz bombs and V-2 rocket bombs. Some 160 German rocket experts went to work for the Soviet missile program. They improved the V-2, boosted its range from 250 to 400 miles and called it the T-1 ballistic missile.

A Steady Step-up

Later they built more power into the engine, added another stage and produced the two-stage T-2 (range: 1,200 to 1,800 miles). This first intermediate missile was tested more than two years ago, now is part of the Soviet arsenal. At recent missile maneuvers in the Arctic, the Reds fired towering T-2s from ships, submarines and land launchers. Our intermediate missiles, the Jupiter and Thor, are superior but still not operational.

From the T-2, the Russians took the big stride to the T-3 intercontinental missile. This is a souped-up, three-stage missile with a powerful engine but weak electronic brain. It is not as advanced as our long-range Atlas and Titan eventually will be. But Russia has fired the T-3 while we are still building the Titan and testing the Atlas' first stage.

The T-3 was launched from north of Vladivostok on the Pacific, traveled about 4,500 miles over the top of Siberia into the Arctic. (This may explain why the Russians used the term "over-continental" instead of "intercontinental.") The goal was distance, at the sacrifice of accuracy. Perhaps we could stretch our ballistic missile range to 4,500 miles, too, by piecing several rockets together in multiple stages. But in any case neither side will have operational ICBMs for three to five years.

Intelligence experts admit Soviet factories are producing more missiles than ours, while, for economy reasons, we have slowed down our production schedule. Our scientists may have a slight technological edge over the Russians. We have developed a better guidance system: we also can pack the II-bomb into a smaller warhead. But the Soviets have designed a more rugged power plant.

Where will this mad race for missile supremacy lead? Will mankind destroy himself by his own genius? Dr. Wernher von Braun, German rocket pioneer now working for Uncle Sam, thinks not.

"Any ballistic missile capable of carrying a nuclear bomb over an intercontinental range can be modified to carry a few instruments to the moon," he says. "Space flight will free man from his remaining chains, the chains of gravity which still tie him to this planet. It will open to him the gates of heaven."

Global map shows today's missile ranges-and tomorrow's

Would Russia or America be more vulnerable to missile warfare? This authentic map, drawn in the Pentagon especially for PARADE, shows the strategic position of both sides. Here is a breakdown of comparative missile strength:

Short-Range Missiles. Both arsenals are bristling with small missiles. Numerically, Russia has more; strategically, ours are better located.

We have built a picket fence of small missiles around the Communist world. Fitted with atomic warheads from secret overseas stockpiles, these can bring the Soviet satellites under devastating fire but only nick the edges of the Russian Bear. Within range are the Black Sea sub base at Sevastopol, Baku oil fields in southern Ukraine, missile and air bases on the Siberian coast above Vladivostok. But the industrial heart of Russia can't be touched.

Medium-Range Missiles. Bussia now has enough intermediate missiles to destroy our forward air bases and bombard our allies from Japan on one side to Britain on the other. Our bases in Saudi Arabia and Spain still are out of range. On this continent, only Alaska can be reached.

Our intermediate missiles won't be ready for combat duty for another year. Then they will be able to reach 98 per cent of Russia's military targets from our overseas bases. Only a jagged hole in the middle of the Soviet expanse would be safe.

Long-Range Missiles. It will be three to five years before the experimental models blossom into an intercontinental missile that can east its shadow half way around the world. The Soviet ICBMs will be able to hit any target north of the Panama Canal. This means the United States, untouched through two world wars, no longer will be a privileged sanctuary. Of course, American ICBMs should be ready to return the fire. Since they will be able to hit any spot on the globe, the map has no line marking their range.

Meanwhile, lesser missiles can be fired close-range by subs, ships and planes. Red subs can slip right up to the American coast and launch missiles from underwater. And our medium-range bombers can now fire missiles at Red targets 600 miles away.

The map has two symbols for "major targets," theirs and ours. Both represent areas only, in two categories: 1) industrial areas and military bases—such as New York, Pittsburgh, Hawaii on our side; Moscow, western Siberia, Vladivostok on Russia's, and 2) missile-launching sites—such as ours in Morocco, Saudi Arabia and Japan; theirs west of Moscow, near northern Finland and in north-central Siberia.

This article was on the press when news of Russia's latest satellite and missile developments broke. Despite the enseing confusion, U.S. long-range military thinking is yeared closely to the facts presented here. This article remains basic reading and is recommended to all Americans—THE EDITORS,

How to refuel on the move

To help keep our missiles flying, the Army has developed something new: a mobile refueling plant. Missiles, like men, require oxygen. Since there is too little in the stratosphere, they must pack their own. Compressed, in liquid form, it is fed into their fuel in flight. The Army's plant not only does the complicated compressing job (converting air to liquid, then distilling out the LOX, or pure oxygen) but can follow a missile crew to any launching site. Today, at Ft. Mycr, Va., the plant will be unveiled. On this page PARADE gives you an exclusive first look at it.

FOUR SEMI-TRAILERS house the Army's new mobile refueling plant. Once compressed, the LOX is rushed to missiles in trucks. A special engineer company will run the plant.

MISSILE IN POSITION gets LOX from tank truck. The LOX is fantostically cold (297° below zero), and in this photo its level in the missile

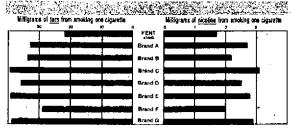

is marked by the rising of frost on the outside. Breathed into the missile fuel in flight, LOX produces the power needed to conquer space.

What do you really know

Answer true or false

Tomorrow morning, Monday, there will be 11,000 more babies in the United States than there are as you read this on Sunday. Three months from today there will be 1,000,000 more. A year from now, America's population will be swelled by more than 4,000,000 members of the dianer set!

All this has been going on for some years - a tremendous baby boom which, on present indications, still may have a good way to run. Last year there were 4,168,-000 births in the country, the greatest number ever. And it looks as though 1957 will top even that total.

This brings up a timely question. How much do you really know about those cute but somewhat baffling little beings called babies? And just how much do you know about their handling once they begin to develop?

Take this quiz to get an idea of how much "small-fry information" you really possess. Based on studies by leading authorities in the field of infant growth and development, it contains facts every grownup should know.

Count 5 points for each correct answer. If you score 70 to 90, you're an expert; 40 is passing; below that, your knowledge is in its infancy.

- 1 All babies are blind at birth. *
- 2 The average girl baby weighs more at birth than the average boy baby.
- 3 First babies generally are larger and heavier than later ones born to the same family.
- 4 A newborn baby cannot taste or smell anything.
- 5 You can tell that your baby will be left-handed or right-handed as soon as he's able to grasp objects.
- 6 Infants only a few days old are not sensitive to heat
- 7 If a young child has a temper tantrum, stop what you are doing and reason with him. Generally he'll see the logic of your position.
- 8 It's a bad idea to give a 2- or 3-year-old child anything to eat between meals. Let him be satisfied with his three meals a day.
- 9 Never allow a very young baby to sleep on his stomach. He may suffocate in that position.

- 10 A baby's teeth begin forming in the gums when he's a few months old, but don't start appearing till the sixth month or so.
- 11 Among the first sounds made by a baby are "ma-ma" and "da-da." This is the first attempt to say "mother" and "daddy."
- 12 A good present to get a 11/2-year-old is a toy merry-go-round that winds up and whirls. He loves to watch it in action.

Circle the correct answer

- 13 Stuttering generally starts at about the age of 2 or 3. It develops (more often-less often-neither more nor less often) in boys than girls.
- 14 A baby gets its healthiest start in life by being born in (summer --- winter --- autumn --- spring).
- 15 A child's head grows as large as it will ever become by the age of (3 - 6 - 10 - 15).
- 16 A newborn baby begins to hear (right away --- at 2 weeks - 4 weeks - 8 weeks).

ANSWERS

All statements in the true-false section are FALSE! Here are explanations of these and other questions.

- 1 A newborn baby cannot see color. His vision is dim, but he is not blind. From the day of birth, he perceives light. At 4 months his vision is developed fully.
- 2 Boys are usually larger and heavier than girl babies at birth and throughout babyhood. But girls beat out boys in certain types of development.
- 3 First babies tend to be smaller than later ones.
- 4 A new baby can taste and smell. Watch him as he detects the odor of milk. And he experiences strong physical sensations - for example, being fondled.
- 5 Generally, infants are more than a year old before they show specific inclinations toward left- or right-handed-
- 6 A new baby is very sensitive to heat and cold. If you move him from a place where the temperature is constant to where it varies, he'll need several days to adjust to the change.
- 7 Ignore the tantrum. If the youngster learns his outbursts net him little, he'll soon give them up.
- B Since a child may not cat a great deal at any one meal, it's perfectly all right to give him extra food at regular intervals. Suggestions: fruit, fruit juice, milk, bread and
- 9 If he seems comfortable, let him sleep that way. Even a young baby can turn his head to get air when he's on a firm, flat surface without a pillow.
- 10 Though teeth do start to crupt through the gums at about six months, they actually begin to form six months before birth. Almost the entire set is formed and hardened in a baby's gums by the time he's born.
- 11 Parents like to think this is so, but it isn't. Babics utter these sounds because they are among the first that come naturally.
- 12 Don't get a baby a toy he can't run without help. An 18-month-old is better off with blocks, soft dolls, colorful pegboards and push-pull toys.
- 13 More often. Boys "outstutter" girls four to one.
- 14 Summer. Warm weather builds resistance to illness.
- 15 Age 6.
- 16 Right away.
- 17 A-4; B-3; C-1; D-2.
- 18 A-2; B-4; C-5; D-1; E-3.

FLOYD PATTERSON'S fist mold (above) comes from a session with Dr. Walter Jacobs (r.). At 22, Patterson is the youngest fighter in Jacob's collection. Oldest: Jack McAuliffe, retired in 1887, who had a fist mold made when past 80.

He collects fighters' fists

Having his fist "taken" in the photo above is Floyd Patterson, heavyweight champion of the world. The taker is Dr. Walter Jacobs, a New York dentist who has spent a good part of the last 20 years filling in what he believes is a large cavity in the history of boxing.

"All kinds of ring records are collected," he points out, "but nowhere can we find out the most important thing about many boxers of the past: What did their fists look like?" To date, Dr. Jacobs has collected 90odd molds of the fists of famous lighters. Method: They dip their fists in a reddish gum used by dentists to take impressions inside the mouth. His molds are on display at the Museum of the City of New York and the Museum of Natural History in New York. One, a mold of Joe Louis' fist, is at the Hyde Park, N.Y., memorial library to Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Dr. Jacobs, a longtime boxing buff, says his compensation is the thrill of meeting

such fistic greats as Mickey Walker, Henry Armstrong, Jack Johnson, Lou Ambers and the idol of his boyhood, Benny Leonard.

He has also learned something. "Some people think," he says, "that the bigger a boxer's fists, the harder he punches. But take a look at the size of Primo Carnera's fist compared to Tony Canzoneri's. Tony hit like a mule, Primo like a powder-puff. The bigger the fist, sometimes, the harder they fall."

PRIMO CARNERA AND TONY CANZONERI: The 15"-diameter fist of Carnera (I.) dwarfs Canzoneri's. But Tony hit hurder, says Dr. Jacobs, since punching power is based on condition and timing, not size of fist.

GENE TUNNEY AND JACK DEMPSEY: In controst to the jabbing Tunney's (L.), Dempsey's first shows the effects — especially in the flattened knuckles — of the sledgehammer blows he delivered over the years.

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.

Ever since the kidnap-death of their first son in 1932, the family of the famous flier Brig. Gen. Charles A. Lindbergh has shunned the spotlight. This shyness has applied to all five Lindbergh children: Jon, Land, Scott, Reeve and Anne.

Above, however, you see a Lindbergh in the spotlight: the oldest son of the "Lone Eagle," Jon, 25, making his motion-picture debut in Underwater Warrior. The movie is based on the exploits of Comdr. Francis Fane of the Navy underwater demolition teams—the "frogmen." Jon, who portrays a young officer in a battle sequence, served under Fane and now is his partner in a firm which specializes in scientific undersea research.

Because of this association, young Lindbergh took the part — a job that lasted two days. After that, he visited his parents in Darien, Conn., then settled down in a new home here with his wife and two small daughters.

San Diego remembers his father: the then-unknown flier came here in 1927 to inspect a monoplane later named The Spirit of St. Louis. Old-timers call Jon his "spittin' image—tall, lean, good-looking and just as quiet."

He also is just as shy. Underwater Warrior, Jon vows, is his first and last movie. "I am definitely," he says, "not an actor." But for a few minutes on film he has given America a good look at the new generation of Lindberghs.

times she's had to scurry from school to school with Bobby.

"When he was in fourth grade," she says, "I'd already taken him out of six schools, mostly because he didn't like them. Once I entered him in a class for especially bright children. He walked out after the first day."

Aware that Bobby is a child prodigy whose talent must be helped to grow, Mrs. Fischer has continued to try to get special training for him. "I've visited university guidance centers and agencies for gifted children," she says. "Mostly they suggest I enroll him in a small private school, where he would get closer attention. But private schools are expensive."

"One thing I would suggest," says a teacher at the public school he attends, "is that Bobby spend more time studying and less time at chess."

Mrs. Fischer nods helplessly. She feels that to ask that of a boy who won the 1957 Open title, topping all but two of the best players in America, would be rather like asking Mickey Mantle to play less baseball and more mah jongg. Bobby, she says, plays chess even while eating, keeps a

ALONE in rectangle, Bobby takes on more than 20 good chess players at one time. He defeated them all. Despite his

Blond and on the thin side, Bobby away from chess is much like any teenager. He's wild about blueberry pie, the Dodgers, baseball, basketball and plaid shirts. He listens to rock 'n' roll records for hours on end. So far, he has shied away from girls and dancing.

$1 and a Rainy Afternoon

He's cocky about his chess. Once he played Samuel Reshevsky, the balding little accountant who's been the king of U.S. chess since 1936. The experienced Reshevsky, 46, polished off Bobby, then 13, with little trouble. But afterwards he told a bystander: "The boy is brilliant; he'll go far." Bobby, meanwhile, was pointing out to anyone who would listen how Reshevsky had missed moves that would have ended the game sooner.

What amazes old chess hands is that Bobby has been playing the complex game less than eight years. His sister Joan had bought a $1 set to while away a rainy afternoon; she and her 6-year-old brother played a few games, but he was only mildly interested. Two years later he walked into the Brooklyn Public Library—he's a voracious reader—and saw Max Pavey, an international chess master, standing inside a rectangle and playing as many as 20 matches at once.

The curious Bobby sat down at a board and made, a move. A few minutes later Pavey had forgotten about the other players and was concentrating hard on beating Bobby. He did, but it took him 15 minutes — a long time for an international master against an 8-year-old who'd played only a few games in his life.

A teacher of chess, Carmen Nigro, witnessed the game. Impressed, he offered to teach Bobby. Within a few years Bobby was beating Nigro regularly. By 1956, now a member of the Manhattan Chess-Club, he had tied for fourth in the U.S. Open and won the National Junior Championship — the youngest titleholder in history.

This glittering record carned him a bid to the Lessing J. Rosenwald tournament, the top test of U.S. chess to which only six to 12 of the top players are invited. He was beaten several times — but, playing against the only man in the tournament to defeat Reshevsky, Bobby won.

"I never saw any game played better," says referee Hans Kmoch. "It was the game of the century."

Bobby finished eighth in the tournament, but won the coveted prize for brilliancy. Among those finishing behind himwas Max Pavey, his library opponent of seven years earlier.

Last summer Bobby scored his greatest triumph, winning the U.S. Open Chess championship at Cleveland. He defeated the best American players with the exception of Reshevsky and Larry Evans, neither of whom competed. In the next few months, some experts believe, Bobby may prove himself the equal of them both.

Money for His Mother

Right now, though, he must start doing better in his school work and try to help out his hard-working mother. To make money, he has taken on as many as 30 challengers simultaneously at $1 a challenger. But such games, he says, "don't produce good chess. They're just hard on your feet."

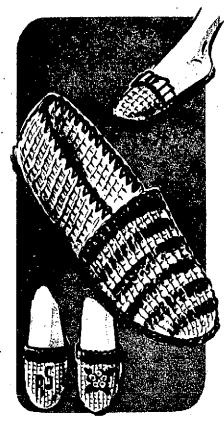

Recently his chess playing has started to produce bigger dividends. He won $750 for winning the Open, $125 in another tournament. This, he says, will help him toward his goal: the chess championship of the world.

cling peaches hot make this WESTERN RANCH DINNER

Takes one pan! Tastes just wonderful!

With golden clings, frying chicken, Ballard OvenReady® Biscuits, Pet Evaporated Milk®

To prepare: Heat oven to 425°. Dip cutup frying chicken (21/2-3-lbs.) in 1/2 cup Pet Evaporated Milk. Roll in mixture of 1 cup flour, 2 teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon paprika, ¼ teaspoon poultry seasoning if desired. Set aside remaining flour mixture. Melt 1/2 cup shortening in 13 x 9 inch pan, add chicken skin-side down. Bake uncovered until tender, basting occasionally. (Average cooking time 40 to 50 minutes.) Turn chicken, pile in end of pan. Arrange drained cling peach halves on chicken, Separate Ballard OvenReady® Biscuits, put into other end of pan. Bake 15 minutes, until biscuits are brown. Remove food to plates and keep warm.

For Gravy: Blend ¼ cup set-aside flour with pan drippings. Gradually stir in 1 cup water. Boil and stir 2 minutes. Stir in 1 cup Pet Evaporated Milk. Heat, but do not boil. Season to taste. Serves 4 or 5.

NOTE: Only Clings hold their shape through cooking. Clings are handsome and tasty. So be sure to look for the cans marked "cling" on the label!

6 HOLIDAY DESSERTS

by BETH MERRIMAN Parade food editor

The six beautiful desserts on this and the following pages - enough for all the feasting to come in the next two months — feature the well-loved, traditional flavors in brand-new guise. Most of them are lighter, less rich than their old-fashioned cousins, but none the less delicious. Happy eating!

1 Pink and pretty, rich and smooth — but it's only 90 calories a serving, figure watchers!

Low-calorie Cranberry Sherbet (at I. in photo)

- 3/4 cup canned strained cranberry sauce
- 3/4 cup orange juice
- 1/4 cup water
- 2 tablespoons light corn
- 1 teaspoon grated orange peel
- 1/3 cup water
- 1/3 cup instant nonfat dry milk powder

Set refrigerator control at coldest point. Combine eranberry sauce, orange juice, 1/4 cup water, corn sirup and orange peel; beat until smooth. Pour into 1-quart refrigerator tray. Freeze until crystals form around edges of tray. Pour remaining 1/3 cup water into deep 1-quart bowl; sprinkle dry milk powder over surface. Bear with rotary beater or electric mixer until stiff, about eight to 10-minutes. Turn cranberry mixture into large bowl; beat until smooth. Fold whipped milk into cranberry mixture. Spoon into refrigerator tray; freeze until firm. Makes eight servings, at approximately 90 calories per serving. If desired, top each serving with additional whipped milk and a little cranberry sauce.

Mincemeat Butterscotch Parfait (at r. in photo)

- 1 pkg. butterscotch pudding mix (instant or 1 cup mincemeat
- 1 cup whipping cream

Prepare pudding mix as directed on package; chill. Whip cream; fold in mincemeat. Spoon both mixtures alternately into parfait glasses, holding glass on a slant for diagonal effect. Makes eight servings.

3 Fluffy and colorful as a sunset cloud, this vie is a perfect ending for a hearty feast!

Lemon Chiffon Ruby Pie

1 pkg, lemon chiffon 1 cup canned whole berry pie filling mix cranberry sauce 1 baked 10" pie shell

Prepare pie filling as directed on package; just before spooning into pie shell, add cranberry sauce and stir in just enough to make a marbled effect. Spoon into pie shell, mounding higher in center. Chill until set.

4 Here's a pie for the man in your life: handsome as can be, rich with the flavor of port wine.

Raisin-Wine Pie

- 3 tablespoons flour 2 cups golden seedless raisīns
  - I tablespoon grated lemon peel
- 11/2 cups boiling water
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1/2 cup port wine 1/2 cup sugar
- Few drops red food coloring Pastry for two-crust 8" pic

Rinse raisins; add water; boil 5 minutes. Stir in wine. Blend sugar and flour; stir in; boil I minute longer, stirring constantly. Remove from heat; stir in lemon peel, lemon juice and coloring. Turn into pastry-lined pie pan. Cover with top crust. Flute edges; prick surface with fork. To glaze, brush with egg white, sprinkle lightly with sugar and cinnamon. Bake in hot oven (425°) 30 minutes. Continued on page 26

DOING THE LINDY of top New York's International House, Hedwig Verboon (I.) and Teresita Gonzales demonstrate one thing they've learned from American teenagers. Watching: Pola Kaval (I.), Naoka Yamada.

How other teenagers see you

Tomorrow's world will be even "smaller" than today's. That's why what others think of us — our customs and attitudes — is important to you, the adults of tomorrow.

I've been talking with Girl Scouts and other teens from Holland, Japan, Greece, Mexico and South Africa, as well as Americans who have been abroad. All of them have been taking part in student-exchange programs. I find that foreign students of both sexes like American teenagers and teen-age customs — with a few reservations.

Perhaps the most favorable, and typical, comment is this from a girl: "The thing I like most about the United States is that you can talk to a boy without waiting for him to speak first."

On the other hand, one girl said she thought foreign boys treat girls with more respect, "as if you were something fragile." Kyra Blumberg, South Africa, thinks it's "a shock to have a boy call you at six and ask for a date that very evening."

Why Do You Date?

The casualness of boy-girl relations in America has its disturbing side for some who are brought up to link dating closely with love and marriage. Hedwig Verboon, Holland, said: "In the United States, it seems you don't go to a party with a boy because you like him; you go with him because you want to go to parties."

But even Hedwig had to admire the social case of American teenagers. She was astounded at how American girls speak up in public, even disputing parents and teachers. "We're more reserved," she said. "We don't argue with grownups. And we never open our eyes to a boy until we are about 17." By that she meant that proper Dutch girls are too shy to flirt.

Though Dutch schools are co-educational, girls go stag, even to high-school parties. In most other countries, boys and girls go to separate schools. As a result, Teresita Gonzales, Mexico, said she never had a when-to-kiss or whom-to-kiss problem, as so many United States girls do. "I scarcely see a boy alone, even by day. And at night we are always chaperoned."

Naoka Yamada, Japan, was not only amazed at the freedoms permitted American girls but also critical. American parents, she said, push their children into growing up. "Mothers worry if their daughters don't date at 13 or 14. It doesn't seem to me that American children have a chance to be children."

Pola Kaval, Greece, criticized American conformity: "Everybody does what everybody else does. Something in the air compels you to. For example, here girls all wear lipstick. In Greece we do not. But here I must wear lipstick — or, at least, I feel that I must."

Anita McLaughlin, Peru, remarked on how little work U.S. girls do in their own homes. "I pictured them as doing dishes and scrubbing all day long — the sort of endless menial drudgery Indian servants are hired to do in Peru. It's true, teenagers here do help around the house, but they certainly aren't the slaves I thought they were."

All the foreign girls were impressed by American labor-saving housekeeping machines, as visible symbols of our prosperity.

And, like Naoka, all of them also had observed that American teenagers are not treated as children — but as junior adults.

Perhaps, as a result, U.S. boys and girls take responsibility much sooner, the group agreed. "I admire the way so many have paying jobs," was Kyra's comment. "Nobody at home works his way through school, but most everybody here — even girls — helps some."

Americans, on the other hand, were amazed to discover how short the growingup stage is in other countries.

Teresita who, at 18, is still treated as a child and has never been kissed, may well be married within a year, never having had a real adolescence. Some Americans still will be in school at age 22 or 24, dependent on their families, and, in effect, still adolescent.

A Key to Understanding

In this connection, one educator I know points out that ours is one of the very few countries which can afford a long, dependent adolescence. Our technical civilization not only makes this possible but requires it, he says. More education becomes necessary, year by year, just to make a living.

Technical education alone, of course, is not enough preparation for living in a steadily shrinking world. All the teenagers I talked with seemed to feel that getting to know other people as persons is essential.

They urged more travel, more Girl Scout and other student-exchange projects such as those envisioned by President Eisenhower's People-to-People Program. These, they felt, would help maintain friendly ties between their own and other nations in the future, when they—and you—are the world's adults.

DAMASCUS, SYRIA.
Do you doubt the penetration of Red
Russian influence into the Near East?
If so, look at this recent photo of a newsstand in the capital of a numinally independent Arab state.

Syria, a former French colony, for years has had three languages (Arabic, French, English). As a result, most of the publications above bear French or English titles. But note: Almost every one is a Communist propaganda sheet.

with its dove (another) on a hammer-and-sickle. Go right to a second magnizine in Russian, this one featuring happy workers. Peering over them is the Red "god," Nicolai Lenin. Skip left to Images (French); its cover glorifies Egypt's pro-Soviet dictator Gamal Abdel Nasser.

Below Nasser, something called News shows the happy inmates of a Russian children's home. Moscow News and New Times, both offered in two languages, speak for themselves. Finally, more copies of La Chine almost elbow aside two local newspapers of "neutral" content.

Query: If Syrians want pro-Western reading, where do they go?

clair Weeks, deputy conference chairman Dr. Charles N.

HANDSHAKE from President Eisenhower (I.) greets PARADE publisher Arthur H. Motley at Washington small-business conference. Watching (I. to r.) are: Secretary of Commerce Sin-

Helping hand for 'little guys'

Small businessmen, in the spirit of do-it-yourself, meet to see how they can share in the wonders (and profits) of modern research

America's small businessmen long have looked with a mixture of envy and frustration at the research facilities of large business.

They have admired the shiny laboratories for the development of new products. They have reflected wistfully on the intensive market research which their bigger brothers in the business world take for granted. Most of all, they have seen the added profits that seem to stem almost inevitably from newly developed products and better aimed sales efforts.

But to the man who runs the neighborhood shoe store, or the fellow who is playing all the instruments in the business band as he keeps his family's small metalworking plant alive, the wonders of modern research seem almost as remote as they are glamorous. "After all," the small businessman is likely to say to himself, "I've got to do my ordering and write my ads and get the bills out. Where will I get the time - or money - for anything else?"

Aid from Ike

Much of his plea is soundly based. But from Washington recently came news that made the "little men" in business prick up their ears even while they waited on customers and punched the cash register. The word: news of a helping hand from an extraordinary source.

The hand was that of President Eisenhower, himself no stranger to the perils and problems of small business in his younger days. It took the form of a special conference called by the President to examine the research problems of small business.

Its goal was to show small businessmen everywhere - from the "mom 'n' pop" soda shop on the corner to the bigger "little man" with 100 to 500 employees - how they, too, could share in the magic rewards of research as applied to business problems.

At Ike's invitation, nearly 1,000 representatives of small business, trade associations, universities and government met for three days at their own expense. Together they looked over the field of research to see where small business fits in.

Their encouraging answer: If small business doesn't have time or money to do its research on the scale of big business, it still can share immensely in the vast storehouses of research information which are available free or at small cost.

Such storehouses include government agencies, trade associations, the trade and business press, the data which large business often is glad to share with smaller operators and, finally, the experience of fellow small businessmen.

Called the "President's Conference on Technical and Distribution Research for the Benefit of Small Business," the conference was headed by President Eric A. Walker of Pennsylvania State University. Deputy chairmen (for distribution, i.e., sales) were PARADE president and publisher Arthur H. "Red" Motley, and (for technical research) Dr. Charles N. Kimball, president of the Midwest Research Institute of Kansas City, Mo.

Along with trading ideas of their own, small businessmen heard publisher Motley report on a unique "profile" of small businessmen drawn from data assembled before the Conference by the crack New York research firm of Douglas Williams Associates. Some conclusions:

They're All Individuals

- · There is no "typical small businessman." Many of them actually are mavericks; all are highly individualistic.
- · Making money is important to them, but often not as important as their freedom to do as they like, their pride in product or record of success.
- The "little guys" often prefer to stay that way and not get involved in the corporate "team" life of the big companies.

But, though individualists, the small businessmen in Washington showed themselves alert to using the tools of business success, and deeply imbued with a "do-ityourself" philosophy of adapting the other fellow's experience to their own needs-After swapping ideas, listening to reports on research sources and hearing "case histories" of small businessmen who have made research pay off (opposite p.), conferees saw the possibility of getting into the research picture in a major way.

Best evidence that the Conference succeeded was this: a unanimous decision to do it all over again, next time in cities across the land. Continued on page 31

No more cheesecake?

Some top actresses are banning it. Here are the reasons

JOAN COLLINS says she wants to give up photos like this. At right are two other stars, with photos they too have dropped

by LLOYD SHEARER

Parade West Coast correspondent

HOLLYWOOD. It hasn't made headlines, but there's a growing revolt in this town. Its object: the kind of publicity photos known as cheesecake. At least four top-name actresses, who once were only too anxious to pose for leg art, now say they've had enough of it. Kim Novak, Sophia Loren, Joan Collins, Anita Ekberg—they all maintain they want the lensuren to concentrate on their faces or their covered figures, or they just won't pose.

Why? Joan Collins offers this reason: "Hollywood buys glamor. To prove she's glamorous, a girl has to show a pretty face and plenty of figure. Once she does, however, and lands a contract, why continue the cheesecake? It works against you. The public becomes convinced that all your talent lies in your measurements. I want acceptance as an actress, not a pin-up."

Adds Sophia Loren, whose early poses in the nude are now collectors' items in her native Italy: "In the beginning I was so poor, so ambittous, I pose for pictures in nothing. Now no longer poor, no longer pose."

And Anita Ekberg, possibly the most photographed pin-up girl of the decade, says: "If a girl is unknown in Hollywood, her only chance of getting a break is through leg art or body art. Once she gets the break, then she can prove whether or not she can act. The worst thing that can happen to an actress is to be known as 'The Body' or 'The Bosom' or 'Miss Chest Expansion.' It's like being a freak. That's why I've cut out such posing."

It's Happened Before

These statements suggest that actresses who pose for leg art are hardly as abandoned as their photographs might indicate. Instead, most of them are consciously or subconsciously ashamed of their immodesty and use it only as a means to an end. Once that is achieved, they tend to cool on cheesecake in a hurry.

Consider Joan Crawford, Jane Wyman, Rita Hayworth, Lana Turner — to name four long-established stars. To get started in Hollywood, they posed in every conceivable type of costume. They wanted the publicity and knew that would help get it. But once they attained some stature in the movie industry, they felt that leg art was no longer needed — or desirable.

Fifteen years ago, for example, Jane Wyman's studio used to flood city desks with revealing shots of her. Then she starred in The Lost Weekend, won an Oscar for Johnny Belinda and applause for The Yearling, The Class Menagerie and Stage Fright. Suddenly leg art on Jane, Wyman vanished.

Raoul Walsh, a director since 1915, says: "It's been my experience that well-endowed actresses love to pose for cheese-cake when they're single. You know, show the boys their God-given talents, revel in their own young beauty. But once they get married, they usually become more conservative. 'My husband won't like this,' they tell the studio still man."

Walsh points out that Sophia Loren only a couple of weeks ago married her discoverer, Carlo Ponti. Anita Ekberg recently was wed to actor Anthony Steele. Joan Collins is going steady with Arthur Loew, Jr. and Kim Novak has various serious admirers.

Even Jayne Mansfield ...

There also are the proved examples of Matilyn Monroe and Elizabeth Taylor. Before Marilyn married Joe DiMaggio, she posed in the altogether for calendar art and later added the covering necessary to comply with the movie censors. Once she got married, however, that sort of posing came to a quick halt—and has

Even Jayne Mansfield, who's built an entire career on cheesecake, has decided to cover up a little. Explains one publicity man: "Jayne posed in a Bikini at the press showing of Underwater. The resultant notoricty got her a part on Broadway in Will Success Spoil Rock Hunter? A photogenic bosom became her stock in trade. Now she's exploited it to death. Jayne knows it, and we know it; so for a while we're laying low."

In Hollywood's long and colorful history there have been relatively few actresses who never had to resort to leg art for publicity. Mary Pickford, Katharine Hepburn, Bette Davis and Dorothy Mc-Guire are examples. Miss Pickford, of course, is out of the pre-cheesecake era. The other three started on the stage and were signed by Hollywood because they

Deborah Kerr, however, is the exception. Most of her female colleagues feel differently - for now, anyway.
